BARE U. S. GIFT OF JAP CODE TO BRITAIN IN '41

11 Months Before Pearl Harbor

BY PHILIP DODD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—America's secret process for decoding Japanese military and diplomatic communications was given to Great Britain in January, 1941, the congressional Pearl Harbor investigation committee learned today.

Gen. Miles Testifying Before Committee

Information that the closely guarded secret, known only to a handful of top officials in Washington, was given to a belligerent nation while this country was at peace came from Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, who was chief of army intelligence in the year preceding the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Other Developments

Other disclosures today were:

1. Gen. MacArthur was kept supplied with information regarding Japanese movements before the Pearl Harbor attack, which was obtained from decoded Japanese messages. This information was denied to Gen. Short, army commander in Hawaii.

2. On the day of the Pearl Harbor attack the British were claiming to have received assurances of American assistance in repelling Japanese attacks on their far eastern colonial possessions.

3. Testimony by Gen. Miles that 13 points of the Japanese note which meant war with the United States were received in Washington on Dec. 6, the day before the attack on Pearl Harbor, and that the 14th point, the decisive one, was received on Dec. 7.

4. Revelation by Miles of a series of delays in communicating the information to Gen. Marshall, then chief of staff. Decoded messages were available between 7 and 8 a. m. but Gen. Marshall was not "found in his office" until 11:25 a. m.

Gen. Miles, in disclosing that the code cracking process was revealed to the British early in 1941, said the secret was then known to only a handful of top officials in Washington.

"We were anxious to get messages thru the British that our monitors might not have picked up," Miles explained to Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.], who had asked how the British were able to intercept Japanese communications.

Witness Is Excused

"Did you ever get messages they had decoded?" asked Ferguson.

"I don't remember ever having gotten anything from the British," Miles asserted. Later, however, he corrected himself, saying the army signal corps had a code system by which British and American monitors could notify each other if each was intercepting the same message.

Concerning American warnings given to our representatives in the Philippines, Ferguson produced a

A $500 Calf Grows Up as Champ Steer

BY BEN MARKLAND

Seventeen months ago Carl A. Henkel, a contractor of Mason City, Ia., refused an offer of $500 for a 6 week old Shorthorn bull calf named Tomahawk. Last night at the Chicago Market Fat Stock show Tomahawk confirmed Henkel's judgment when he was selected as the grand champion steer of the show.

By last night's victory Tomahawk will bring a return of $3,000 to $6,000. There is a possibility that he may bring a price of $5,000, the amount received for last year's champion. In addition, the winner will be awarded more than $1,000 in cash show prizes.

Auction Starts Today

Selection of the grand champion steer ended the stock show judging. All the competing animals will be auctioned today and tomorrow. Tomahawk will be the first animal sold at 9 o'clock this morning. Carloads of feeder cattle, sheep, and swine also will be auctioned today. Junior steers, wethers, and barrows will be auctioned tomorrow morning.

Tomahawk is owned jointly by Mr. Henkel and Joseph Duea of Belmond, Ia., a 31 year old 4-H club graduate, who groomed the animal for the exhibition. The Duea family has been raising Shorthorns for more than 40 years, Joseph's father and grandfather both having been nationally known breeders of purebred Shorthorns.

Iowa Leads in Prizes

The victory by Tomahawk gave Iowa stock raisers four of the five major awards in the show's cattle and hog competition. Karl Hoffman and Robert Storz, Ida Grove, own the grand champion carload of steers; Robert Johnson of Galva showed an Aberdeen-Angus to the junior grand championship; and George Hoffman, Ida Grove, brother of Karl Hoffman, showed the grand championship carload of swine.

An Illinois farm broke the Iowa monopoly on show championships by exhibiting the grand champion barrow in yesterday's swine competition. The winning barrow was Golden Design, a purebred Chester White owned by the Callahan brothers' farm, Milford, Iroquois county. The brother-owners are Joseph and Porter Callahan, who operate 520 acres near Milford.

From Illinois Sire

An Illinois farm owner also can claim at least a portion of the credit for the grand champion steer, which was sired by a Shorthorn bull bred by Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago packer, on his Edellyn farm. The sire was Edellyn Grand Command, bought by Mr. Henkel from Mr. Wilson in 1941. The dam of Tomahawk was Duchess of Gloucester, bred by F. W. Hubbell, Des Moines, Ia.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 [Special]—The foreign broadcast intelligence service of the federal communications commission will cease monitoring foreign broadcast stations tomorrow. The suspension of service was ordered by the commission after the house reduced the commission's national defense funds to $465,000.

PROTEST G. O. P. RULE FROM EAST

County Leaders Draft 'Grass Roots' Platform

BY ROBERT HOWARD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 4—Illinois Republican county chairmen protested tonight that the G. O. P. national committee is dominated by eastern interests which do not reflect the true sentiment of the middle west, the stronghold of the party.

A protest against control from seaboard internationalist centers is to be presented to the Republican national committee at its meeting in Chicago Friday and Saturday. A three man committee was appointed to draft a declaration of Republican principles from the grass roots.

"This is the home of Abraham Lincoln, and from this region the Republican party got its start and still should look for its true leadership," said T. K. Rinaker of Carlinville, who was named chairman of a special committee to draft the protest.

Long Sounds Keynote

Bernard M. Long of Dupage county sounded the keynote against eastern control of Republican finances and leadership, and two dozen other county chairmen followed him in declaring that Republican resurgence and the dismissal of the New Deal can only come if leadership and candidates come from the midwest, where the emphasis has always been on Americanism rather than internationalism. Complaint was made that the seaboard leaders have been too easily swayed by spokesmen from other nations.

Peyton Berbling of Cairo, and George M. Fisher of Chicago were named members of Rinaker's committee.

"The views that internationalist control must be ended were the views of all chairmen present, and we are united in believing that Republican leadership must be returned to the midwest," said Berbling.

Avoid Talk of Slate

Pointing out that Gov. Green carried all but 11 of the 101 downstate counties a year ago, the chairmen in interviews after the closed meeting noted that midwestern electoral votes, congressional seats, and governors have furnished the backbone of the party during recent years, while the east succumbed to New Dealist internationalism.

The chairmen at two long sessions avoided talk of slate making and concentrated on organization work for the 1946 campaign.

Captain Fooled Us, Parents of Marital Mixup Bride Say

BY WARD WALKER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 4—Jean Gloor Carbone's parents sat tonight in their dismal flat in one of London's poorer suburbs aghast at the way their unfortunate family affair has caught the international spotlight, hopeful that their only daughter will not be deported from America for moral turpitude, and concerned whether her divorce and remarriage will beat the stork.

Emil Gloor, dapper Swiss embroidery designer and manufacturer, who admits he has been a man of the world, says Capt. Darrell Beschen fooled him—an opinion shared by the faded blonde mother, Kathleen.

They told the simple tale of parents whose beautiful 19 year old daughter caught the war fever and was swept into strange waters while they stood helplessly by—heartsick and ashamed.

Always Beautiful

"Jean was always a headstrong girl," the father said. "She was the type of baby who grabbed the bottle from mother. She was always beautiful, and men paid a lot of attention to her. We even had to make her change her job in the fashionable West End because men pestered her. Then the Americans arrived.

"We opened our home to them, and Lt. Harold Carbone asked for Jean's hand. I tried to tell her that his uniform was half of his attraction, and asked her to wait, but she wouldn't listen. They were married in November and he left for America in December, last year. Then Beschen came around—a delightful chap."

Mrs. Gloor interjected, "We loved him like a son. We even told him once that we wished we had another daughter so he could marry her. But we never had the slightest suspicion of the affair."

Unsuspicious of Affair

So it went from January to September, with the parents fond of Beschen and entertaining him in their home, unsuspicious of the affair, while Jean became increasingly certain she had made a mistake in marrying Carbone, tho she wrote to him regularly.

"She knew she had made a mistake the day of the marriage," Mrs. Gloor said, "and his letters, mushy things, made her certain. She threw his letters to the floor once, and said, 'the ass,' but she said she wanted to tell him personally, not by letter."

Then on Oct. 15 Beschen sailed for America, and Jean, two days later, six months pregnant, broke the news to her parents. "We were amazed," the Gloors said. Then began a mad race against the stork, with Jean just one of 50,000 GI brides wanting to get to America. A lucky break put her aboard an American Air Lines flagship. She reached Chicago last week and was met by Beschen.

Chance in a Million Fails

"One chance in a million," Gloor moaned. "She had to step in front of the camera. Carbone had to see the picture and arouse the American police!"

He said his daughter carried a ticket from Dubuque, Ia., home of Beschen, to Rochester, N. Y., where Carbone is a student, and intended to pick up Beschen, confront Carbone and plead for a divorce.

Now everything is topsy turvy—"We hope the baby is born a Beschen," Mrs. Gloor said. "She really loves him, and it's his baby. He admitted it to us in a letter."

Drive on Vice in Berlin

BERLIN, Germany, Dec. 4 (AP)—The four nations occupying Germany, aided by German civilian police, are pushing a drive against vice and delinquency.

About 2,500 Berlin women and girls are being seized weekly. Up to last week, 50 per cent of those examined had venereal diseases.

A senior American medical officer estimated there are 250,000 women of "easy virtue" in Berlin, among whom at least 60,000 are classified as professional or semi-professional prostitutes.

"These figures shock even the Germans," the medical officer said. "They reflect more than a moral breakdown, more nearly a chaos, to which many factors contribute."

In the American sector alone, raids last week brought in 817 girls and women. Girls taken in raids are given physical examinations, and first offenders who are found healthy are released by the German police with a warning. Second offenders are fingerprinted, photographed, and warned again. Third offenders are jailed.

Reported 'Hysterical'

Dubuque, Ia., Dec. 4 (AP)—Mrs. Jean Carbone, 19, red-haired British girl who married an American lieutenant in England but came here to be with a captain who says he is the father of her unborn child, was said today to be "hysterical and exhausted" and remaining in bed. The report of her condition was made by Capt. Darrell Beschen, 25, in refusing to allow her to be interviewed.

RESERVE CORPS AND ANNAPOLIS MEN PUT ON PAR

Marines Personnel Also Boosted

BY WILLIAM STRAND
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—Legislation raising the authorized strength of the regular navy to the unprecedented peace time strength of 500,000 enlisted men and 40,000 officers was passed by the house today, amid promises that the Annapolis caste system is to be abolished in the post-war navy.

The permanent strength of the marine corps would also be increased under the measure from the pre-war total of 46,400 enlisted men to a new high of 100,000 and the number of authorized marine officers, from 2,500 to 8,000. The pre-war strength authorized for the navy was 244,760 officers and men.

House leaders asserted the proposed increases are necessary to assure an adequate military force guaranteeing national security in the post-war world.

Recognition to Reservists

Ironically, as the house acted the senate was approving United States participation in the new league of nations which its backers claim will assure world peace.

More than 50 per cent of the officers manning the peace time fleet will be drawn from the battle hardened veterans who served as reservists during the war, the house was told. The legislation states specifically that there shall be no discrimination against those reservists who volunteer for commissions in the regular navy.

"The measure recognizes the admirable performance of the temporary and reserve officers during the war as well as the nation's continued need for their services," the naval affairs committee said.

Charged Discrimination

During the war, the navy was the object of bitter criticism from many reservists who charged they were not receiving treatment accorded Annapolis graduates. All reservists were marked by the initials "U. S. N. R." after their names while Annapolis men and others in the regular navy were permitted to use the "U. S. N." designation after their names. The extra "R." denoting a member of the reserves was regarded as a relic of an outmoded caste system.

"In order to remove any apprehension on the part of naval reserve officers regarding their opportunities for advancement in event of their transfer to the regular navy," the bill states, "it is hereby declared to be the policy of congress that there shall be no discrimination whatsoever against officers because of the sources from which they entered the regular navy, and that regardless of the source from which they entered, they shall receive the same treatment with respect to opportunities for [1] promotion or advancement to all grades in the navy, [2] holding any positions or assignments in the navy including proportionate representation on selection boards."

The measure provides that all men transferring to the regular navy will continue to hold their present war time ranks and their names will go on the regular promotion lists according to their training and experience. When post-war readjustments in grade are made, the bill provides, the schedules will be applied to all on the same basis.

Kent Returns After 5 Years in British Jail

Hoboken, N. J., Dec. 4 (AP)—Tyler Kent, whose career as a junior American diplomat was halted in 1940 when the British imprisoned him on charges of larceny of an embassy document in London, said today he took several documents because they "contained information which the senate and the people of the United States should know about."

Kent, 34, smartly dressed and smiling, made the remark as he debarked from the British steamer Silver Oak, on which he sailed from London 12 days ago.

He said at a news conference he had planned to get before the United States senate the documents he took from the embassy.

Statement Promised

Kent served nearly five years of a seven year sentence after being convicted at a secret trial in Old Bailey court of "violating the official secrets acts."

"In due time," said Kent, "I will have something to say that will be of interest to the people of the United States."

He declined to reveal the nature or number of the documents he took to his apartment from the embassy, but said "they related to the foreign relations of the United States, and I don't want to be more specific at this time."

When asked how he had planned to get the documents to the senate, Kent replied: "That is a method I had not worked out."

Charges Called False

He dismissed as "pure invention" and "strictly fiction" published reports that 15,000 coded messages were found in his apartment and that while officials were there a telephone call came from the Italian embassy which led to discovery of an outlet by which contents of messages allegedly reached the Germans.

Kent also disclaimed reports that microfilm pictures of messages were found in possession of Anna Wolkoff, 42, daughter of a Russian admiral. She later was sentenced by the British to 10 years' imprisonment for violating the British official secrets act in the case involving Kent.

"I do not think that there was any intention originally of making any charges whatever against me," Kent said. "I believe those charges were made as a result of pressure from officials of the United States."

Tried in Secret

He remarked that it was "at least two and a half months after Kennedy [Joseph P. Kennedy, then ambassador in London] dismissed me before any charges were made against me," and that he believed he was tried in England instead of the United States because England had provision for secret trials of civilians and "no such trials were then being held in this country."

Asked about reports that keys to the embassy code and index rooms were found in his apartment, Kent said:

"Those keys were issued to me quite legally and officially."

In the room with him as he talked was his mother, Mrs. Ann H. P. Kent of Washington, who had fought for her son's release.

In answer to questions, Kent said he was anxious to tell his story before United States officials and before the present congressional inquiry into Pearl Harbor if asked to do so.

KENNEDY CHALLENGES HIM

Joseph P. Kennedy, former ambassador to Britain, last night challenged Tyler Kent, former clerk in the United States embassy in London, to make public any information he may have that would be of interest to the American people. Kennedy arrived here from New York on a business trip in connection with the Merchandise Mart, which he now owns.

ROLE IN WORLD POLICE FORCE IS PART OF BILL

President Could Act Independently

HOW THEY VOTED
Roll call of the senate vote on the new league of nations may be found on page 2.

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—The United States senate voted tonight to place the United States in the new league of nations and to give the President authority to send American men to war at the behest of foreign nations without consulting congress.

It voted to authorize the President's representative in the new league of nations to consider only world peace—not justice—in committing America to war against a nation that the league may brand an aggressor, even tho that nation may be fighting for its liberty with the full sanction of the American people.

Vote Is 65 to 7

The senate's vote was cast in approval of the league of nations bill dominated by the internationalists. The bill was passed, 65 to 7, and sent to the house, after Republicans and Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.] had fought hopelessly for a week in an announced effort to harmonize internationalist doctrine with the United States Constitution and American tradition.

Even tho they knew that almost certain house passage will send the United States further down the internationalist road, Wheeler and six Republicans recorded their final opposition by voting against the bill. The Republicans were Senators Taft [O.], Moore [Okla.], Shipstead [Minn.], Revercomb [W. Va.], Wherry [Neb.], and Langer [N. D.].

Powers for President

The bill was written to authorize the President to appoint American representatives to the league and make treaties with it in furtherance of the international coöperation pledged in the league charter, which the senate ratified by a vote of 89 to 2 last July 28.

At that time, the senate was promised that senate ratification would be approved for the President's league treaties, the most important of which will be for making American men and weapons available for its global police work.

Treaties Become "Agreements"

But when the bill was presented by the senate foreign relations committee, which is dominated by internationalists, the senate discovered that the treaties were being referred to as "agreements" which could be approved by a majority vote of both houses of congress, rather than ratified by a two-thirds vote of the senate. Withdrawal of the senate's power of ratification is one of the goals of the globalists.

Down from the administration came the word that the bill was sacrosanct: It must be jammed thru without change because it was the doctrine of those who call the warring lands "the peace loving nations."

Chairman Connally [D., Tex.] of the committee smiled, did his huladancer routine between the rows of senate desks, and said agreements had been made by the President with foreign nations as far back as his memory went.

Stand of Vandenberg

Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], the dominant Republican member of the committee, said that he had no objections personally to senate ratification. But then he was a member of the committee, and the committee had voted the other way.

So Connally and Vandenberg, who were American representatives at the San Francisco conference, where the charter was written, came out for joint house and senate approval by simple majorities, and Vandenberg offered no clear explanation when Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.] demanded why Vandenberg had changed his mind.

Meanwhile a propaganda campaign described by some senators as the greatest ever organized for a legislative proposal was in progress to sell the bill to the senators' constituents.

American Practices

Republicans who believe in international coöperation, but insist it can be accomplished under the Constitution, sought to make the bill conform to American practices.

One was Sen. Taft. He offered an amendment instructing the American representative on the league's security council, or enforcement agency, to consider international justice as well as international peace in casting America's vote to make war.

Taft said that maintenance of international peace might make it expedient for the council to order a nation wiped out with atomic bombs. But he did not see why Americans should wipe out Indonesia because it declared its independence and England wanted it destroyed. Nor did he feel that American lives should be sacrificed to erase Finland for Russia in the event that Russia wanted to dominate Finland and Finland wanted liberty.

Proposal Is Defeated

The internationalists pooh-poohed Taft and defeated his proposal, 41 to 18.

That was the relative strength the Republicans found each time they sought to amend the bill. The internationalist forces even defeated a proposal yesterday that the senate confirm the President's appointees to the league's general assembly and other subsidiary organizations, but decided today to give a crumb to the Republicans. Connally accordingly announced that the committee was willing for the senate to confirm these appointees and threw enough votes behind the offer to pass it.

Sen. Wheeler Aroused

The greatest drama of the debate came today when Sen. Wheeler blasted the internationalists for misleading the American people and pleaded that the President be forbidden to send to war, without consent of congress, the American troops made available to the security council.

The towering veteran of 22 years in the senate accused the internationalists of deceiving Americans by telling them the President had frequently used American forces without asking congress and not telling them that such use of armed might was authorized in each case by special circumstances.

Wheeler warned that the time is coming when the American people and not the Washington propagandists "in their gilded cages," will make America's decisions.

"Violation of Constitution"

He told the senate that abdicating its war making power to the President is a violation of the Constitution and a step into a new and untried field of international politics.

But Connally thundered that acceptance of Wheeler's proposal would kill the bill, and the senate voted, 65 to 9, against Wheeler. Republicans who voted with Wheeler were Brooks [Ill.], Langer [N. D.], Moore [Okla.], Revercomb [W. Va.], Shipstead [Minn.], Wherry [Neb.], and Willis [Ind.]. Sen. Chavez [D., N. M.] also voted for the Wheeler ban.

The bill authorizes the President, with senate approval, to appoint a $20,000 a year security council representative and a $12,000 deputy. It also authorizes five $12,000 a year representatives to the assembly, with senate approval, and provides for representatives at unspecified salaries in other league institutions.

And it enables the signatory nations, if they're big, to punish signatory nations that are small. There's no way of punishing a big signatory nation because the big ones can all veto action against themselves.

Brooks Explains Vote

Commenting upon his vote for the bill itself, Sen. Brooks said:

"After the congress had overwhelmingly voted to participate in the united nations organization, I expressed my views and voted to limit the authority to be entrusted to our representative on the security council. Failing in that effort, I voted to continue our coöperation and will strive constantly to force our representative to express the will of the American people in insisting on justice to small nations and oppressed people thruout the world.

"Unless this is done, the united nations organization will be a mockery and a dismal failure.

"Ultimate peace based upon justice can be our only justification for our tremendous sacrifices and future efforts.

"I regret exceedingly that we were unable to write this principle more forcibly into the present implementing legislation."

Anderson made the letter public today and inserted it in the congressional record. He told the house he asked for the statement on Chinese policy because the recent resignation of Ambassador Patrick J. Hurley.

SHUT RUBBER FROM ALCOHOL PLANTS IN U. S.

Kilgore Says He Will Ask for Probe

BY ROBERT YOUNG
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—Sen. Kilgore [D., W. Va.] said today he will ask the Meade war investigating committee to inquire into the sudden closing of the largest synthetic rubber plant in the world at Institute, W. Va.

Kilgore disclosed his plans for pressing a congressional investigation, as well as taking up the matter with the White House, as the Reconstruction Finance corporation announced that the government is shutting down its entire rubber-from-alcohol program and closing alcohol butadiene plants which cost 117 million dollars.

The huge government owned plant at Institute which used alcohol was ordered closed down by the RFC last Friday. Kilgore and other members of congress were mystified by the surprise move. They said that the large amount of synthetic rubber produced there and at other plants had been relied upon to stabilize the price of natural rubber from the far east at reasonable levels.

Called Economy Move

The RFC's decision to suspend rubber-from-alcohol operations, which, officials explained, was dictated by "good business and economy reasons."

The RFC officials said that the petroleum plants are cheaper to operate than those using alcohol. Kilgore said it was his understanding that the alcohol plants cost less to run than those using petroleum, because the alcohol could be produced from waste products and grain.

Oil Plants Sufficient

The country can get from oil all the synthetic rubber it needs, officials said. G. B. Hadlock, associate director of the office of rubber reserve, said that petroleum plants could produce enough butadiene to make 600,000 tons of general-purpose synthetic rubber annually.

The estimated need for the next twelve months is put at 550,000 tons, since the government now estimates that 300,000 tons of natural rubber will come in from liberated and other areas. In addition butadiene stockpiles are ample.

Besides the Institute plant, the RFC disclosed, government-owned alcohol butadiene plants at Louisville, Ky., and Kobuta, Pa., have been ordered shut down. The one at Louisville already is closed, and the other two are making their final runs. The RFC said the three plants will be kept in "stand-by condition" ready for reopening should the need arise.

ASKS FOR PROBE OF LEND-LEASE, USE OF GOODS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—A resolution calling for a congressional inquiry into all lend-lease operations was introduced in the house today by Rep. Dworshak [R., Idaho], a member of the appropriations committee.

Rep. Dworshak

Under the terms of the measure, which was referred to the rules committee, the investigating group would be required to delve thoroly into the use of United States lend-lease materials to suppress independence movements in colonies of former allies. A case in point, said Dworshak, is the use of American tanks and guns by the British and Dutch to put down a rebellion in Java and the East Indies.

OTHERS FLYING 3,000 AMERICAN AIR TRANSPORTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—Foreign countries have 3,000 American-built transport planes obtained thru lend-lease, an aviation industry survey of government records showed today, with expectations that about two-thirds will be retained for permanent use.

The total number of planes overseas is about nine times more than were being used by all United States domestic air lines when the war started. This country built about 20,000 transports during the war.

Great Britain and Russia have 83 per cent of the total distributed thru lend-lease. All are army C-47 type, a modification of the Douglas DC-3 which is used by most air lines. The British also received 11 C-54s, a four engine plane, but is returning them to the United States.

Lend-Lease C-47s

Lend-lease C-47s are held by these countries: Australia, 139; Great Britain, 1,864; Canada, 47; New Zealand, 47; Bolivia, 4; Brazil, 11; Colombia, 1; China, 71; France, 53; Netherlands, 23; Russia, 727; Norway, 7.

Government officials estimated 188 C-47 types might be sold overseas in addition to 383 already sold to 24 countries. The prospective market includes five planes for Norway, 143 for France, 10 for Belgium, 20 for Poland, and 10 for India.

Planes already delivered or committed to delivery include Norway, 10; Sweden, 12; Ireland, 5; France, 83; Belgium, 6; Netherlands, 14; Denmark, 8; Spain, 21; Portugal, 8; Switzerland, 3; Czechoslovakia, 12; Greece, 2; South Africa, 25; Egypt, 5; Saudi-Arabia, 5; Iran, 5; Ethiopia, 5; Lebanon, 5; India, 24; Indo-China, 30; Netherlands Indies, 21; Philippines, 5; China, 39; Australia, 30.

Applications for C-54s

The United States has applications for 69 C-54 types, but has delivered only 15. It has allocated 55 among 12 countries and foreign air lines.

The applications include Aeronaves of Mexico, 1; Mexican National company, 4; Avianca of Colombia, 3; Panair do Brasil, 4; China National Aviation company, 6; Cruzeiro of Brazil, 2; France, 20; Latin American Air, 2; Netherlands, 19; Dodero, which operates in South America, 4. Belgium and Sweden have no formal applications, but four C-54s have been allocated to each country.

Eichelberger Flying Home to Put Feet at Yule Fire

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Dec. 4 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Eichelberger, commander of the United States 8th army, will fly tomorrow for the United States to spend a short Christmas leave with Mrs. Eichelberger in North Carolina. It will be their first yule together since 1941. "I hope to sit in front of the fire," the general said, "visit friends, and relax." Lt. Gen. C. P. Hall will command the 8th army in Eichelberger's absence.

GERMANY MUST BE SAVED FROM RUSSIA, EASTLAND WARNS

Sen. Eastland

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—Sen. Eastland [D., Miss.] said today the western powers "cannot permit" Germany to become a satellite of Russia, which he termed a "predatory, aggressor nation."

Speaking in the senate, he said:

"The communists know that a hungry, chaotic Germany will and must embrace communism and that a soviet Germany would lead to the sovietizing of the smaller nations of western Europe and the collapse of democracy outside Britain and the United States.

"Whether we like it or not Germany is the keystone of the structure and Germany and western Europe must be kept by all means within the folds of democratic, freedom loving Christian people who follow the private enterprise system."

EXPECT RECORD MEAT SUPPLIES FOR DECEMBER

More meat will be available to civilians during December than at any time on record, R. J. Eggert, associate director of marketing of the American Meat institute, declared last night at the annual meeting of the serum industry and control agency in the La Salle hotel.

Estimates based largely on government data, he said, indicate that civilian meat supplies for the remainder of this month will be at the yearly rate of more than 175 pounds per capita. Eggert said this exceeds by more than 60 pounds the yearly per capita rate in the second quarter of this year.

Eggert estimated meat supplies for 1946 at 154 pounds per capita and said this will be nearly 16 pounds more than the pre-war 1939-'41 average.

50 SHOPS IN CHICAGO AND SUBURBS

OFFICER TELLS HIS STORY OF NAVY DISASTER

No Order to Leave Ship, Court Informed

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—An officer of the Indianapolis testified today that he heard no orders from the bridge to abandon ship after the 10,000 ton cruiser apparently was torpedoed on July 30 with the loss of 880 men, one of the greatest disasters in naval history.

Lt. McKissick

This information was given to a navy court martial at the trial of Capt. Charles B. McVay III., the ship's commander. McVay pleaded innocent to charges of negligence and inefficiency.

The witness, Lt. [j. g.] Charles B. McKissick of McKinney, Tex., was one of only 15 officers to survive the sinking of the ship en route from Guam to Leyte.

Conclusion of Witnesses

The court martial developed testimony from a half dozen witnesses, that:

1. Three submarine contacts had been made only 72 to 105 miles from the charted course of the cruiser and any one of the submersibles could have crossed its path.

2. McVay ordered zig-zagging ceased at 8 p. m. July 29 because the weather had closed in—"pitch black."

3. Two "terrific" explosions rent the ship shortly after midnight of the 30th. It sank by the bow in 15 minutes.

Astronomer Discusses Moon

An astronomer of the navy observatory, Gerald Clemence of Washington, D. C., said the moon shed a fourth of full moon visibility the night of the sinking at the point of the explosions.

McKissick, a senior watch officer that night, said, however, that while he was on duty there were times when "you couldn't see two or three feet."

The prosecution sought to develop before the seven man court that the zig-zag course should have been resumed once the moon gave any visibility.

McKissick said that had the darkness lifted while he was on duty he would have ordered zig-zagging "and Capt. McVay would have been pleased." His watch ended several hours before the explosions, he said, and he did not know what the conditions were around midnight.

Awakened by Blast

McKissick related that he was awakened by the explosions and managed to get to the main deck thru smoke and fire. He estimated the vessel, hard hit on the starboard bow, listed almost immediately at a 45 degree angle. During the following 15 minutes it was afloat, he said, he did not hear any orders from the bridge to abandon ship and there were "none addressed to all hands."

McKissick took it upon himself, he said, to issue orders to his men to prepare to abandon ship when he saw conditions.

Samuel Giacubelli, who was struck by auto in June, as he appeared in Criminal court yesterday.

The appearance of Samuel Giacubelli Jr., 9, of 2805 Emerald av., who hobbled into the courtroom on crutches, moved Judge Irwin Clorfene in Safety court yesterday to announce a new "tough" policy toward motorists involved in traffic violations which result in injuries or fatalities.

"Some defendants whine that I am a tough judge," he said. "Well, I am going to get tougher and we are going to stop this slaughtering and maiming on the streets of Chicago."

The Giacubelli boy was injured last June in front of his home by a car driven by Walter Hendry, 33, a laborer, of 734 W. 25th pl., who was charged with leaving the scene of an accident, reckless driving, and with failing to have a driver's license. Hendry said he borrowed the car to drive "five or six blocks."

LEAHY OPPOSES ARMY AND NAVY MERGER PLAN

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—Adm. Leahy today opposed proposals for a single national defense department as "radical" and "revolutionary."

The war time chief of staff to both President Roosevelt and President Truman told the senate military affairs committee he was offering "my own personal views."

"I am quite certain that naval efficiency would be seriously reduced," he told senators in discussing recommendations by war department officials and army generals that a single post-war defense department be formed with navy, army and air force branches.

"It might improve war department efficiency," Leahy said, adding that the war department had been completely reorganized during the recent war and so "has not had the test of time of the navy department."

PALMER HOUSE AIDS CONFIRM NEGOTIATIONS

Henry L. Hollis and Edward Lawless, representatives of the Palmer House, both confirmed yesterday that negotiations are being carried on for the sale of the famous hotel to Conrad Nicholson Hilton, owner of Chicago's Stevens—the world's largest — and a dozen other hotels across the country.

Hollis is board chairman of the Palmer House company and represents the Potter Palmer family, which has owned the hotel since Civil war days. Lawless is president and manager of the Palmer House.

Neither Hollis, Lawless, nor Hilton, who was in Chicago, would comment on reports originating in New York financial circles that the price for the hotel and the 25 story Palmer House garage at 20 Quincy st. would be around 19 million dollars.

Hilton, president of a dozen or more big hotels, including the Roosevelt and Plaza in New York, the Town House and Ambassador in Los Angeles, Cal., and one in Mexico, purchased the Stevens last Feb. 15 for a reported 7½ million dollars.

BYRON PRICE GIVEN POST WITH MOVIE DISTRIBUTORS GROUP

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—Appointment of Byron Price as vice president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America was announced tonight by Eric Johnston, president.

Price, who served during the war as director of censorship, will be in charge of the association's Hollywood office.

"All with whom I have talked in the motion picture industry have great respect and admiration for Mr. Price," said Johnston in a statement. "Every one knows his brilliant record in carrying out a difficult and delicate task during the war."

Johnston said "the program in Hollywood will include development of research directed toward improvement of techniques and toward wider use of the film; extension of the use of motion pictures in education and in training, and development of enlightened labor-management relations. The success of the program lies in coöperative effort both within and without the industry."

POLES EXPRESS FEAR OF FUTURE UNDER RED RULE

Chicago Yank Relates More Adventures

(The following is another instalment of an unvarnished story on conditions in Poland, told by a Chicagoan who recently was retired from the army of the United States. He escaped from a marching column of American prisoners of war near Szubin, Poland, last January, and after many hardships managed to meet a minister in the cabinet of the Russian sponsored government of Poland who took him to Lods. Fictitious names are used for all Poles mentioned in the story, in order to protect them from retaliation.)

BY ROBERT E. DAVIS
[First lieutenant, army of the United States, Retired]
as told to Carl Wiegman
[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

In contrast with other Polish cities, Lodz had escaped serious war damage. The lighting, water, and telephone systems were in operation, and even the street cars were running. That is, they all ran in one direction in the morning and in the opposite direction in the evening.

The city was crowded with soldiers and refugees, and I couldn't understand how they survived, because all the food stores were empty. At the Grand hotel, where I was the guest of Minister Wellisz, no one was permitted to eat in the restaurant unless he lived in the hotel.

Champagne Takes Over

On the evening of our arrival the minister was in an expansive mood. He ordered champagne, which soon loosened his tongue, and he began to talk about his brother in the United States.

"My brother was always begging me to come to America," he said. "Now look what has happened. In America my brother is a nobody. Look at me. I am a minister in the Polish government."

He pounded his thick chest proudly. Soon afterward the champagne got the best of him, and we had to put him to bed. It was a job, because he weighed more than 200 pounds.

In the morning I wandered into the hotel lobby, where I met a young Polish man and two smartly dressed girls—really beautiful girls even by American standards. They took me to lunch in the hotel restaurant. Both girls spoke English well and one of them said she had a sister in Washington, D. C. I remarked that I was surprised to see them wear such fine clothes.

Fearful of Future

"O, you should have seen us before the war," they replied. They laughed at me, but I could see they were pleased by the compliment.

We were served by a gray haired waiter who also spoke English. He explained that before the war he often talked to American and British business men who stayed at the hotel. The waiter and the girls wanted me to tell them about America and asked the usual questions about what the United States was going to do for Poland.

"We are fearful of the future under the Russians," the waiter said. "The Germans were cruel and we hated them, but at least they kept order."

Later in the day I reminded Minister Wellisz of his promise to arrange transportation to Moscow for me. We had difficulty understanding each other and he summoned the hotel's interpreter, a woman, who said she had been a Polish correspondent for the Nation, an American weekly magazine.

The woman said I ought to join other American officers in the city who also were waiting for a ride to Moscow. I protested that it was difficult to travel in groups and that I preferred to go alone, but the upshot of the conversation was that I consented to cast my lot with the other officers. I located the other officers and joined them.

Consents to Go Along

On our third day in Lodz we were told to assemble at Red army headquarters. Two Russian guards took charge of us, and we started marching. The guards refused to tell us where we were going, but we expected that our destination was a railway station.

We were marched to the suburbs of the city, stopping at last at the gate of a barbed wire enclosure. Inside the compound we could plainly see prisoners in German and Italian uniforms.

One of our guards went inside while the other stayed with us. We waited at the gate for an hour, furious at the prospect of being imprisoned with Germans and Italians. I swore to myself that if I ever got out of this mess I would try to travel alone, taking no more advice from women mazagine correspondents.

At last our guard emerged from the compound and told his pal that the commandant had refused to accept us. This meant that at least one Russian officer had some sense, but we were disgusted as we started trudging back to the city.

Slips Away in Park

We got a ride on a street car for about a mile; then the street car stopped. Dusk was approaching and street cars were not permitted to run after dark. We started walking again. After a while I saw a chance to slip away from the column by mingling with civilians, and did so, but immediately regretted it, because I realized it would be dangerous to be on the streets alone at night.

The Russians required everybody to be off the streets after dark. Those who disobeyed this order were shot without ceremony.

Invited into Cab

I stopped a Polish civilian and tried to explain my predicament, but he couldn't understand me. He gave me half a loaf of bread to show his good intentions. I was standing on a corner, eating the bread and worrying, when a horse drawn cab approached. It was flying a white flag with a red cross, and its single passenger was a woman.

I shouted "Americanski, Americanski"—my password. The woman ordered the driver to stop and invited me to enter the cab. She explained that she was a physician. I said I needed a place to sleep, and would like to go to the Grand hotel.

When the cab reached the downtown district, the woman got out, told me good night, and gave directions in Polish to the driver. I couldn't understand what she said, and told the driver I wanted to go to the Grand hotel. He paid no attention to me. The next thing I knew the cab had stopped at a courtyard gate.

"No, no," I begged. "Take me to the Grand hotel."

The driver was polite, but firm, and motioned for me to enter the courtyard. Then he drove away. Soon the gate was opened and to my great relief the place turned out to be the Polish Red Cross headquarters. A woman wearing a gray costume somewhat like a nun's habit gave me soup, meat, and bread, and introduced me to a Polish army officer who could speak English.

U. S. GIVES UP 90% OF PROPERTY IT HELD IN UNITED KINGDOM

LONDON, Dec. 4 (AP)—The United States army has reduced property holdings in the United Kingdom by 90 per cent and 405,397 troops have been redeployed to the United States since V-E day, Brig. Gen. Claude M. Thiele, new commander of the United Kingdom base, said today.

Thiele, who succeeded Brig. Gen. F. S. Strong Jr. on Dec. 1, said the policy set by Gen. Eisenhower of closing down installations, disposing of surplus property and sending home troops as rapidly as possible would be vigorously pursued.

American troops in the United Kingdom, he said, now number 50,473, a drop of 26,386 from Nov. 1. In the last month the army has turned over to the British 19 depots and camps, 14 air fields, three hospital sites, and 24 London properties. The original holdings were 3,000 properties in 1,108 towns and villages.

MRS. ROOSEVELT NOW DISCUSSING MADAME CHIANG

Fort Devens, Mass., Dec. 4 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today that Mme. Chiang, wife of the generalissimo, was typical of the Chinese in that "she can talk beautifully about democracy, but she does not know how to live democracy."

Mrs. Roosevelt referred to Mme. Chiang during a question period after speaking to soldier patients at this army post's Lowell General hospital.

The inability to "live democracy," she said, was typical of the Chinese "not because of any facetiousness, but because they never had an opportunity to see or practice democracy in action." It is "just nonsense" for the United States to be afraid of "any one in the world," she told the soldiers. "Russia hasn't started any wars," she said in answer to a veteran's question about Russia as an aggressor nation.

FOREIGN CHIEFS OF 5 NATIONS TO MEET, REPORT

LONDON, Dec. 4 (AP)—The British Press association, quoting "delegates to the united nations preparatory commission," said tonight a five nation foreign secretaries' conference would be held soon, with President Truman possibly substituting for Secretary of State Byrnes.

A survey of delegates failed to confirm the report.

According to the British Press association, the foreign secretaries of the United States [or President Truman], Britain, Russia, France, and China will meet during the united nations assembly in January.

CANADA TO END GOVERNMENT'S AUTOCRATIC RULE

War Time Powers to Be Revoked Jan. 1

BY FRANK HUGHES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 4—The dominion provincial conference, it was learned tonight, has curtailed Prime Minister Mackenzie King's war powers so effectively that the government of Canada will revert to parliament on Jan. 1 if a bill now proposed by the prime minister's Liberal party is approved.

The dominion provincial conference, composed of the prime minister and the premiers of Canada's nine provinces, was called last August to persuade the provinces to relinquish their constitutional power to collect income, corporation, and succession [inheritance] taxes in a trade for an extensive social security program and direct dollar grants from the dominion treasury.

The conference took a three month recess and reconvened for a week on Nov. 26.

Demands Watered Down

The work of swapping constitutional taxing powers for federal subsidies and a socialistic welfare program has not gone far, but the nine premiers have succeeded in forcing the dominion to water down its demand for a continuation of war powers.

Mackenzie King's ministers introduced the "national emergency act" last August to continue for an indefinite period the government's war powers, as drastic and autocratic as those held by Prime Minister Churchill under the British "defense of the realm" act in England.

The excuse given was that price control regulations, needed to prevent inflation, could be exercised only by this means.

Premiers Open Fight

When the nine premiers convened here again on Nov. 26, they began an immediate attack on this bill, shelving discussions of the topics for which they were summoned. They held, collectively and individually, that if the provinces were to surrender constitutional taxing rights to the federal government, the provinces should have assurance that the dominion would not exercise autocratic powers in peace under the guise of a war emergency ended months before.

The result was that the cabinet amended the "national emergency act," adding the word "transitional" to its title, and ending the war controls on Jan. 1.

Jackie Coogan Becomes M. C. at Hollywood Club

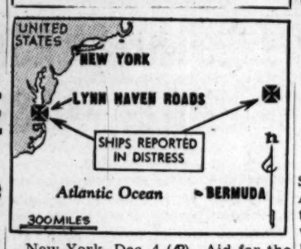
Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 4 (AP)—Jackie Coogan has taken over as master of ceremonies at a Hollywood night spot, Slapsy Maxie's, and does a bit from his silent movie, "The Kid." Jackie, once wealthy and the former husband of Betty Grable, recently returned from four years with the army air forces.

Ships Ask Help



New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Aid for the Liberty ship Henry Ward Beecher, wallowing propellorless and helpless in the Atlantic with 541 American homeward bound troops aboard, will not arrive before some time Thursday afternoon because rescue craft were given the wrong position, the 3d naval district said tonight.

The Beecher first was reported in distress about 340 miles northeast of Bermuda, but corrected information put her 170 miles further away.

The navy, however, in its announcement tonight said there was no immediate cause for concern about the safety of those aboard—the 302d military police escort guard company and the 542d and 544th ordnance heavy maintenance companies.

The Beecher was en route from Marseilles, France, to Norfolk, Va.

The coast guard also said tonight the American cargo ship John Gibbon had gone aground between Cape Henry lighthouse and Norfolk, Va. No casualties were reported.

WOMAN OUTWITS ROBBER; FEIGNS A HEART ATTACK

Miss Vera James, 5235 Greenwood av., last night outwitted a Negro who tried to rob her after forcing his way into her automobile at 4915 Drexel blvd. Threatening her with a knife, he demanded her money. She handed him only 7 cents and he ordered her to drive on with him in the car. A short distance farther on she began gasping for air and told him she had suffered a heart attack. The Negro fled when she stopped the car. Miss James is owner of a baby scale rental service and had made a delivery to the Drexel blvd. address.

NURSE'S SLAYER SAYS HER MIND WAS ALL BLANK

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 4 (AP)—Sobbing and wringing her hands, Annie Irene Mansfeldt denied from the witness stand today that she was conscious of events when she fired a bullet into the breast of Nurse Vada Martin, whom she suspected of pirating the love of her husband, Dr. John H. Mansfeldt.

The tearful denial of knowledge of the shooting highlighted the day's testimony in Mrs. Mansfeldt's trial on a first degree murder charge.

On Oct. 3, the night before the shooting, her husband took her to a show. The witness said that when they arrived home she was "utterly exhausted and he gave me two yellow pills."

Phone Rings Again

"The telephone rang at 11 o'clock as it had rung the same hour on many occasions," she continued, "and John started to go out."

Despite her husband's promise not to see Mrs. Martin any more, she believed he was going to another meeting with the nurse. Mrs. Mansfeldt said he angrily forced her to accompany him with only her coat thrown over her night gown.

On their return he gave her two more pills and a sweet liquid which tasted somewhat like alcohol. She said she did not remember going to sleep.

"What was the next thing you remember," Defense Atty. Vincent Hallinan asked.

"I was lying on the floor of a police automobile. I was in strange surroundings—I was holding two silver strings in my mind—I must care for John and there must not be two insane parents of the children."

Sobs She Doesn't Know

"Do you know of your own knowledge if you shot Mrs. Martin?" Hallinan asked.

"I don't know," Mrs. Mansfeldt sobbed.

She said she did not recall telephoning the nurse for an appointment, of going to meet her, of quarreling with her about Mansfeldt, or of shooting her.

Under cross-examination by Prosecutor Norman Elkington she continued to deny she remembered anything about the shooting, and wore a slightly startled expression when he read from four statements she made on the day of the shooting in which she admitted having killed the nurse.

Mrs. Mansfeldt earlier told the jury she twice had attempted suicide.

G. M. OFFICIAL 'HOPES' STRIKE WILL END SOON

Union Parley Expected to Reject Truman Plan

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 4 (AP)—Hope that the strike of 175,000 General Motors employes could be settled without resort to President Truman's fact finding board was expressed today by Harry W. Anderson, the corporation's vice president in charge of personnel.

Anderson made his comment at Washington as it appeared the appeal yesterday by Mr. Truman for an immediate return to work by strikers had failed to dent the ranks of CIO unionists seeking to enforce demands for a 30 per cent wage increase.

Opposition to such a move and to the President's proposal for the fact finding board spread in CIO United Automobile Workers' ranks today, with some leaders expressing belief a conference of UAW-CIO representatives from G. M. locals would reject the program by an overwhelming vote when they meet here Saturday.

Prepared to Bargain

Emerging from a conference with Edgar L. Warren, chief of the United States conciliation service at Washington, D. C., Anderson said General Motors was prepared to bargain collectively with the union as soon as its complaint against "illegal picketing" was disposed of.

Representatives of corporation and union will meet here tomorrow to discuss management's charge that supervisory and office employes have been illegally barred from G. M. plants.

Anderson was asked, "Do you think the strike can be settled without a fact finding board?"

"I hope so," he replied.

The President' plan for such boards was assailed in Detroit by John W. Anderson, chairman of a UAW-CIO veterans' committee, as continuing what he termed "the war time practice of denying the workers their just demands thru an agency set up by the government."

Confers with Murray

R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO international president, who said he was opposed to Mr. Truman's proposals, conferred at Pittsburgh, Pa., with Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and then left for Washington.

C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors; Thomas and Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, who has led the fight for a 30 per cent wage increase for G. M. workers, were invited by a citizens' group meeting in Detroit to present their views on the wage dispute and to answer questions.

The citizens' committee, meeting at the invitation of the UAW-CIO, today began to listen to a transcript of the seven sessions of wage negotiations—all held before the present strike started—engaged in by General Motors and union representatives.

The group, including former OPA Administrator Leon Henderson, said they planned to question both union and G. M. representatives Wednesday and then vote on recommendations resulting from their study.

Reuther, speaking at a meeting of UAW members, assailed Truman's labor stand as a "clean cut break with Roosevelt's policies."

Murray Breaks with Truman; Plans to Fight Strike Curb

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 4 (AP)—CIO President Philip Murray tonight rejected President Truman's proposals for ending strikes and charged that the federal administration has "completely ignored human rights" in the current industrial problems.

In an outright break with the administration, Murray asserted in a radio address that "the design of the specific legislative proposal" of the President "is to weaken and ultimately destroy labor union organizations." He added:

"It can be but the first step for ever more savage repression. For this reason the CIO shall mobilize its entire membership and the American people to defeat this specific measure, and all similar attempts directed against labor."

Sees Appeasement Policy

The CIO leader said the administration is embarked "upon a policy of continued appeasement of American industry in the face of its contemptuous attitude toward the American people and the government itself."

This was Murray's reply to the President's message to congress calling for legislation which would create fact finding commissions to inquire into major disputes. President Truman had at the same time called on the CIO United Auto Workers to go back to work and appealed to the CIO United Steel Workers, of which Murray is also president, not to strike to back up a demand for a $2 a day wage increase.

Asserts Bargaining Refused

"Industry has refused to engage in collective bargaining," said Murray. "Industry has refused to accept voluntary arbitration in the automobile dispute. Industry has refused to meet with the union in the steel industry tho specifically requested by the federal government.

"To all this arrogance, the federal administration yields in abject cowardice.

"I am profoundly disturbed at the implications inherent in the President's proposal. It marks a very serious departure from the policies which the people of this country have repeatedly approved within recent years under the leadership of President Roosevelt."

UMW Calls It "Fooler"

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers opened an angry attack today on President Truman's program to curb big strikes. While in the house plans were announced to rush action on the legislation before Christmas.

The UAW issued a statement calling the Truman recommendations a "fooler bill to revamp and straitjacket American industrial relations."

"Gen. MacArthur," said the statement, "has ordered an end to enslaved labor in Japan by ordering the repeal of an anti-strike law passed in 1938, sponsored by the Jap military authorities. Mr. Truman proposes to transplant it here."

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, said at a news conference today that the General Motors fact finders would be appointed in a day or two, and that the appointments in the steel case would follow soon afterward.

On Capitol Hill, acting chairman Ramspeck [D., Ga.] of the house labor committee told reporters a bill embodying the Truman request will be introduced tomorrow.

Group to Defer Action

The house military committee had considered tacking new labor legislation on to a pending bill revising the Smith-Connally labor disputes act, but Ramspeck said he understood the military group would defer action "for about a week in order to allow our committee to act."

The bill to amend the Smith-Connally act would penalize unions striking in violation of no-strike agreements and tighten existing restrictions on political activity by labor organizations.

LABOR, INDUSTRY CONFLICT ON AS PARLEY FAILS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—Labor and business groups which had joined in President Truman's labor-management conference were in headon conflict tonight over various labor bills pending in the house.

Leaders of the nation's biggest labor organizations, addressing a meeting of more than 100 house members, vigorously objected to proposed anti-strike legislation and a bill to include labor unions in the so-called anti-racketeering act of 1934.

Provisions of the legislation include loss by a union of its bargaining rights if it engages in an illegal strike and new restrictions on political activity by unions.

AFL President William Green said the legislation had united all of labor in "immovable opposition" and contended that such measures would endanger free enterprise and swing American labor "to the left, as the trend has been in other countries."

Other Opposition Speakers

Other opposition speakers included R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO-Auto Workers, and representatives of the United Mine Workers and railroad brotherhoods.

Shortly before, the United States Chamber of Commerce had announced its support of the legislation.

Resolutions reaffirming the chamber's stand were approved by the board of directors Friday, the closing day of the labor-management conference, but were not announced until tonight.

Neither the labor leaders nor the United States Chamber, however, referred to President Truman's message of yesterday, in which he asked for legislation to curb big strikes by creation of fact finding procedure patterned after the railway labor act.

Hear Labor's Side

The labor representatives objected to bills reported out by the house military and judiciary committees, on which they contended there had been no opportunity for unionists to be heard. Rep. Sabath [D., Ill.], chairman of the rules committee which cleared the legislation for floor action, called the special meeting of house members to hear "labor's side."

"They don't have any strikes in Russia," Green said, "but do we want a strikeless nation under a totalitarian government?"

Thomas, who represented the CIO in the absence of President Philip Murray, said the measures were designed "to smash the labor movement in this country."

HOUSE GROUP VOTES SHARPLY MODIFIED EMPLOYMENT BILL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—Legislation designed to minimize unemployment was approved by the house expenditures committee today after long consideration and much revamping.

The measure would declare it a federal policy to maintain "a high level of employment" thruout the country.

To accomplish this it would:

Set up a three member council of economic advisers to the President;

Direct the President to report to each session of congress, starting in 1947, on ways of averting unemployment, and

Set up a special senate-house committee to act on the President's report.

The house committee eliminated two key sections of the Truman sponsored proposal. One enunciated a government policy of maintaining "full employment" by providing jobs to supplement private enterprise, if necessary. The other would have given all able bodied Americans an opportunity to find work if they wanted it.

TRIBUNE HELPS LECTURER TAKE PICTURE IN DARK

Dr. Leslie J. Brooker of the Eastman Kodak research laboratories, coupled an actual demonstration with the lecture on photographic dyes and emulsions which he gave last night in Lincoln hall on Northwestern university's Chicago campus. With the coöperation of THE TRIBUNE, which provided the equipment, a photograph was taken of the audience in total darkness with infra red lamps and film when the meeting began at 7:30 p. m. The film was rushed back to The Tribune news rooms where it was developed and dried. At 9 p. m. the picture was shown by projection in the lecture hall.

STRIKE BESET SIX YEARS, BOSS SAYS 'I GIVE UP'

Trucking Firm 'Quits' as New Tieup Begins

Holland, Mich., Dec. 4 [Special]—Wearied of strikes and faced with a new one, John Cooper, president of the Holland Motor Express, Inc., announced today that his interstate trucking firm, in business since 1929, would cease operations immediately and would be liquidated.

His announcement followed the opening of a strike against the company by the AFL Teamster's union. The action was an outgrowth of an unusual strike at a Holland grocery company which Rep. Jonkman [R., Mich.] described on the floor of the house as "high handed brigandage by labor leaders."

The trucking company operates 180 pieces of rolling stock in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky.

Operated at a Loss

"We have been having trouble with the union for the last six years," Cooper said. "We have operated at a loss of $75,000 during the last three years, and were plugging along hoping that with the end of the war we would start showing a profit.

"When this new situation arose yesterday we were negotiating with the union for a contract that would saddle the firm with another $100,000 for labor alone. We couldn't absorb that loss and now, with this strike on top of everything else, we have decided to quit business."

The other local strike, to which the truck company's trouble is related, is at the Standard Grocery company. Efforts of AFL organizers to unionize the grocery employes resulted in a vote about three weeks ago. The employes voted 100 per cent not to join the union.

Employes Picket Pickets

Despite the employes' overwhelming rejection, the teamsters union picketed the company as "unfair to organized labor." The employes picketed the pickets with placards calling the union "unfair to employes" who voted 100 per cent against it.

Meantime, the truck company's union drivers refused to cross the picket line at the grocery. Consequently the truck company announced it would permit the grocery's nonunion drivers to pick up supplies at the truck firm's terminal. Because of this action, the truck company's employes went on strike.

U. S. GAVE JAP CODE TO BRITISH IN JANUARY, '41

Miles Reveals Sharing of Closely Guarded Secret

radiogram from the late President Roosevelt to Francis B. Sayre, then high commissioner of the islands, dated Nov. 26, 1941, warning of Japanese aggressive moves toward Thailand and stating:

"I consider it possible that this next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Japan." The President asked Sayre to warn Filipino President Quezon and to tell him he [Roosevelt] was counting on the full support of the Filipino government and people.

Failed to See "Winds" Note

The President also referred to warnings addressed to MacArthur and Adm. Thomas C. Hart, then commanding the Asiatic fleet, and urged Sayre to consult with both officers.

Ferguson also produced an affidavit made by MacArthur May 7, 1945, in which the general said he had seen "every" intercepted message passing thru his headquarters, but had not seen the "east winds rain" message sent by the Japanese as final instructions to open the attack on the United States.

"Dispatches from the war department," MacArthur stated in the affidavit, "gave me ample and complete information and advice for the purpose of alerting the army command in the Philippines on a war basis, which was done prior to 7 Dec., 1941."

None Went to Short

After today's session, Ferguson told reporters MacArthur should be called as a witness before the committee and that he intended to suggest such a move. He said he wanted to clear up the matter of how many intercepted messages the general saw.

Testimony given by Miles previous to today revealed that no decoded Japanese messages were sent to Gen. Short at Hawaii.

Evidence that the British expected the United States to give immediate assistance in the event of Japanese attacks on their far eastern colonial possessions was contained in a message from Adm. Hart to Adm. Harold R. Stark, former chief of naval operations.

The message, dated Dec. 7, 1941 [Dec. 6 Washington time], read:

"Learned from Singapore we have assured British armed support under three or four eventualities. Have received no corresponding instructions from you."

Ferguson asked Miles if, as chief army intelligence officer, he had ever heard of Stark's inquiry. Miles said he had not, altho he admitted it would have been valuable information for him to have had.

MORNING SESSION

Only two hours before the attack on Pearl Harbor army intelligence chiefs in Washington were expecting Japan's first war thrust to come in Thailand, the committee was told at the morning session.

Gen. Miles told the committee that Thailand seemed the most likely initial target, even tho a study in retrospect of decoded Jap messages then available to him might indicate an attack on Pearl Harbor.

Rep. Gearhart [R., Cal.] noted that decoded documents in Miles' hands on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, before the attack, disclosed that Jap envoys planned to deliver their "war message" to State Secretary Hull at 1 p. m. [Washington time] that day, an hour coinciding with dawn at Pearl Harbor.

Time Was Significant

Gen. Miles said he considered the 1 p. m. time was "highly significant," but not necessarily in relation to Hawaii.

"Didn't trained intelligence officers in Washington think the timing meant Pearl Harbor would be the place of attack?" Gearhart asked.

"Not that I remember," Miles replied. "Dec. 7, 1941, was a hectic day. We probably didn't stop to figure the timing in relation to overseas bases. We expected an attack somewhere, probably in Thailand, and wanted all overseas bases alerted."

Gen. Miles related in detail his recollection of his part in the events of Dec. 6 and 7, a conference of army chiefs with Gen. Marshall, chief of staff, in Marshall's office on the morning of Dec. 7, two hours before Japan struck.

14 Point Message

He said the final Japanese note came to this country in 14 parts, the first 13 on Dec. 6 and the 14th, Tokyo's advice for its ambassadors to deliver the note at 1 p. m. Sunday, the next day.

His account exposed a tragic series of delays in communicating the vital decoded information to Gen. Marshall and in getting the resultant warning to Pearl Harbor.

The decoded documents indicating the Japs would strike at 1 p. m. [Washington time] were in the hands of Col. R. S. Bratton, army intelligence officer, sometime between 7 and 8 o'clock that morning, Miles recounted.

The witness said Col. Bratton called him at home between 7 and 8 o'clock and said he had important information. Bratton further explained he had been unable to reach Gen. Marshall, who was out horseback riding.

Can't Recall Details

Miles said he reached his office at about 9 a. m. and conferred with Bratton. Asked by Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.] to explain the delay in getting to his office, a distance of about one mile, the witness said he could not remember the details clearly. He said he was not sure whether he had "shaved" or had breakfast before Bratton called.

The information then in the hands of Miles and Bratton was of high significance, and indicated the Japs planned "military action" at 1 p. m., or only about four hours later, Miles said. No warnings were immediately sent overseas, however, because Gen. Marshall had not arrived.

After conferring with Marshall about 11:25 a. m.—Miles said he "found" the chief of staff in Marshall's office at that time—and telling him of events, the memorandum continued, Marshall wrote out a warning message, after first conferring by telephone with Adm. Stark, then chief of naval operations, who, Miles said, did not think "further warnings necessary."

Agreed on Thailand

The memo said Lt. Gen. L. T. Gerow, chief of the war plans division, arrived with a Col. Bundy and that they agreed Thailand was the most likely point of attack. The warning message, penciled by Marshall, the account continued, was given to Col. Bratton "to take immediately to the message center."

Miles' account said Gen. Gerow told Bratton as he was leaving for the message center to "tell them to give first priority to the Philippines if there is a question of priority."

When Bratton returned, he was asked by Marshall to find out how long it would take to deliver the messages, and reported, Miles said, that they would be "encoded in three minutes, on the air in eight, and in the hands of the recipients in [I think] 20."

The witness said Col. Bratton recalled that he delivered the messages at 11:50 a. m. to the signal corps.

The message to Pearl Harbor, sent by commercial cable, did not reach the army signal officer in Honolulu until nearly six hours later, or four hours and 12 minutes after the attack, according to testimony inserted in the record today.

PRO-BATTLESHIP ADMIRALS GET JOLT IN SHAKEUP

Forrestal Sets Sights for an 'Air Navy'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—Battleship minded admirals were given a terrific jolt this afternoon by a navy department shakeup which assigned top sea and shore naval commands to aviator admirals.

Navy Secretary Forrestal set naval sights for an "air navy" as the capital reverberated to the army and navy barrage of arguments on the controversial unified command issue.

Vice Adm. John H. Towers, commander of the 5th fleet, was designated eventually to succeed Adm. Spruance as commander in chief of the Pacific fleet. Spruance recently succeeded Fleet Adm. Nimitz, who is slated to become chief of naval operations and commander in chief of the fleet.

Mitscher to Head 8th Fleet

Vice Adm. Mark Mitscher, now deputy chief of naval operations for air, is to become commander of Spruance's 8th fleet. He commanded task forces of carriers with brilliance during the war.

Towers long has battled for air recognition and was a leading supporter of aircraft in the airplane versus the battleship controversy which has raged in the navy department for the last quarter of a century.

Before Pearl Harbor he was head of the navy bureau of aeronautics. He violently protested against shipping navy planes to Britain and stripping the navy's air defenses.

The admiral was reportedly relieved of his command for his determined stand.

Three of Six Major Posts

Forrestal announced that in the future admirals trained as aviators will hold three of the six major posts in Washington which come under the chief of naval operations.

The post of vice chief of naval operations will be filled by Vice Adm. Dewitt Ramsey, former chief of the bureau of aeronautics and now deputy commander in chief of the Pacific fleet.

Now Held by Mitscher

The post of deputy chief of naval operations for air, which was formerly designated as the chief of the bureau of aeronautics, will be, of course, filled by an air man, it was said. It is now held by Mitscher.

Three other key posts under Nimitz will be filled by nonair admirals. These are Vice Adm. Louis E. Denfeld, deputy chief for personnel; Rear Adm. Bernhard H. R. Bieri, deputy chief for administration, and Vice Adm. William S. Farber, deputy chief for logistics.

CLOTHING MAKER ASSAILS FREEZE OF WORSTEDS

The present shortage of clothing has been caused primarily by the freeze of worsted yarns which went into effect last January, Manfred Goldman, president of Cohen, Goldman & Co., of New York, said in Chicago yesterday.

He described as "propaganda" a recent statement by Price Administrator Bowles that the shortage was caused by the holding back of shipments by manufacturers of textiles and clothing for tax reasons. He accused Bowles of "passing the buck."

HERE IS LAST CHANCE TO SEND GIFT TO YANKS

BY HARRY McCLAIN

This is the last chance.

The coupon in the adjoining column which has appeared in THE TRIBUNE since Nov. 4 will not appear after today.

Tribune readers who desire to send a Christmas gift to wounded and sick service men in army and navy hospitals to add a bit of cheer to their stay away from home and family may clip this coupon and mail it with a stamped, addressed envelope to the Friend of the Yanks department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The service man's name will be returned within a few days.

15,000 Ask for Names

Thus far more than 15,000 Tribune readers have asked for names of military hospital patients to whom they will send gifts. These people, singly and in groups, have asked for from one to 500 names, thus assuring gifts for nearly 35,000 patients. Requests have come from all except 12 of the 48 states.

Many readers have asked the Friend of the Yanks for suggestions about what to send to the service men for Christmas. The cards upon which they will write their names contain a list of suggestions, and a choice may be indicated by a check mark.

A Few Suggestions

Here are some of the suggestions listed on the printed cards: Books, billfolds, cake, candy, cigars, cigarets, cookies, gloves, games, handkerchiefs, knives, key cases, lighters, magazines, pajamas, pens, pencils, puzzles, records, slippers, snack boxes, socks, sweaters, scarves, stamps, tobacco, pipes, toilet kits, ties, and writing kits.

The gifts service men may request are not limited to this list. Neither are those who send gifts restricted by the list. Gift senders may send whatever gift they believe to be appropriate and allow their generosity to be guided by their purses.

ATTORNEYS SELECT FOUR MORE JURORS FOR TRIAL OF NISCHT

Four more jurors—two of them men—were accepted and sworn in yesterday before Judge Charles E. Byrne, of the Criminal court, to try Joseph Nischt, 31, a janitor, on a charge of murdering Mrs. Rose Michaelis, 58, by burning her alive in a south side apartment building furnace. The state is seeking the death penalty. Four jurors, all women, were accepted last week. Four more are now needed.

The four accepted yesterday, after both prosecution and defense lawyers had been prodded by State's Atty. Tuohy, were: Mrs. Elsie M. Lewandowski, 32, of 4054 George st.; Ernest Stone, 55, of 15212 Myrtle av., Harvey, a foreman; Joseph Schlehofer, 49, of 2511 S. St. Louis av., a baker, and Mrs. Marjorie F. Verkler, 24, of 2515 Clinton st., River Grove, a typist.

SURPLUS U. S. HOUSING MAY GO TO STATES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—The government may turn over surplus buildings to the states without cost to meet the housing emergency.

W. Stuart Symington, surplus property administrator, was reported tonight by an official of his agency to be considering issuing such an authorization tomorrow. It would be effective at once.

The official, who asked that he not be named, said the terms as contemplated call for:

1. The states to maintain the property.

2. Houses to be rented first to veterans and after that to the general public.

States to Use Federal Sites

3. Demountable [knocked down] houses in storage areas of various disposal agencies to be erected by the states on favorable federal sites.

4. Leases to be for a maximum of five years with permission to terminate on six months notice at the end of the housing emergency.

5. Rents in excess of maintenance costs to revert to the government.

The official said the order could be expected to authorize the army and navy specifically, together with other owning and disposal agencies, to make surplus housing available to the states.

The order would include barracks, cantonments, demountable houses, and the like.

Calls for Help

The worsening plight of veterans and others seeking homes prompted the government today to call for help in getting full scale housing construction under way.

John B. Blandford Jr., national housing administrator, invited representatives of contractors, labor, finance agencies, and materials producers to a Washington conference Dec. 17 for advice on clearing away obstacles delaying quantity home production.

Earlier Sen. Mead [D., N. Y.] renewed appeals for funds to transfer temporary war housing and abandoned army barracks to cities.

Asks 195 Million

Mead testified before the senate education committee in behalf of his resolution to provide 195 million dollars for "panelizing" war housing. This is a process of cutting up the temporary dwellings into panels for transportation and erection in localities which need them.

Mead estimated his proposal would provide 100,000 temporary dwelling units for veterans.

BRITISH OUTLINE 20 NAZIS' CRIME AGAINST PEACE

Charge Defendants Set Germany's Course

BY HAL FOUST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 4—The international military tribunal, its charter and the legal precedents it is establishing were upheld today by Hartley Shawcross, British attorney general, in a five hour address opening Britain's prosecution of count two—crimes against the peace—of the indictment in the war crimes trial. His presentation of the British case was a defense of the tribunal as an instrument for securing world peace as well as a condemnation of the 20 top Nazis on trial here.

Replying to arguments that the charter has defined as crimes acts without such definition in international law at the time of commission, Shawcross said that this is not retroactive legislation in violation of democratic jurisprudence, but a logical step forward in civilization's attempt to outlaw war.

Will Give Impartial Record

"The tribunal," he said, "notwithstanding its appointment by the victorious powers, will act with complete and judicial objectivity to provide an authoritative and impartial record to which future historians may turn for the truth and future politicians for warning."

Shawcross accused the defendants of piloting Germany into "naked and unashamed" aggression, and said that persons who do this "do so with a halter around their necks."

He said he intended to prove "that the waging of an aggressive war is not only a dangerous venture but a criminal one," and that he would do so by applying the "law of nations" which branded aggression as "an international crime before this tribunal was established."

He emphasized particularly the Kellogg-Briand pact, signed in Paris in 1928, pointing out that this agreement outlawing war as an instrument of national policy was never denounced by the Nazis and hence still stands as accepted international law.

"The pact of Paris is the law of nations," he declared. "This tribunal will enforce it."

Defendants Built Up Hitler

The four victorious powers who are trying the nazi leaders, the British prosecutor said, "are content to be judged by the verdict of history" on their policy of "interpreting, declaring, and supplementing the existing law."

The nazi defendants "were no mere tools," Shawcross said. They are the men whose support had built Hitler up into the position of power he occupied. They are the men whose iniative and planning, perhaps, conceived and certainly made possible the acts of aggression made in Hitler's name."

Stressing the individual responsibility of the defendants, Shawcross asserted:

"They are the men whose skill and cunning, whose labor and activity made it possible for the German reich to tear up existing treaties, to enter into new ones and flout them, to reduce international negotiations to a hollow mockery and finally to march against the peoples of the world to secure that domination in which, as arrogant members of their self-styled master race, they professed their belief."

Resume Story of Czechs

Shawcross' address was delivered outside the regular trial schedule, before America had completed the main burden of the prosecution, the conspiracy count. When he finished Assistant United States Prosecutor Sydney S. Alderman resumed his account of the nazi conspiracy to devour Czechoslovakia after the cession of Sudetenland.

One top secret Hitler order initialed by Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and issued less than a month after Munich bore the bold caption, "liquidation of the remainder of Czechoslovakia," and set forth instructions to the army and air force for a surprise attack. Alderman will complete his Czech story tomorrow.

CHUNGKING, Dec. 4 (AP)—Rumors of a Chinese Communist air force in northern Manchuria and charges of mass conscription for Nationalist forces kept the threat of renewed civil war alive in China today.

Lt. Gen. He said all were in operating condition. Rumors drifting down from Harbin said Communists had more planes and were ready to use them against Tu's forces.

Advance elements of Tu's armies were 30 miles from Mukden, awaiting a go ahead signal from Russian forces before moving in.

KEITEL SAYS HE NEVER OPPOSED HITLER'S PLANS

BY DANIEL DE LUCE and NOLAND NORGAARD

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 4 (AP)—Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Hitler's military shadow for seven years, asserted today that the German invasion of Russia, for which he signed his name on many orders, was "a preventive-defensive war."

Field Marshal Keitel

Answering a list of questions submitted by the Associated Press, the 62 year old professional soldier shrugged off responsibility for such tragedies as that in 1941 when "very many" hundreds of thousands of Russian war prisoners "died of exhaustion."

He cited no individual instance when he opposed Hitler's war plans, and stated that if the international military tribunal let him go free he would retire to his country estate in Brunswick province and write a book called "My Memories of Seven Years with Adolf Hitler."

Hasn't Changed Opinions

The cold tenor of Keitel's replies appeared to dismay even his elderly silver haired legal defender, Otto Nelte, who said:

"The field marshal lost one son in the war, another was taken prisoner in the east and a third is in an American prison camp. But he comes of a long line of soldiers and nothing that has happened to Germany or his own family has changed his opinions."

Keitel was asked concerning the German treatment of Russian prisoners.

"I think the question concerns the transporting of Russian prisoners to Germany," was Keitel's answer. "In the encirclement battles of the summer of 1941, hundreds of thousands of prisoners were taken who were mostly already completely exhausted because of the encirclement. Because of the destroyed railways it was impossible to transport these masses directly to Germany. Besides, many of these completely weakened and half starved people were no longer fit to march.

"Transport could only be started after the railways were put in order. For the same reason, and because of the gigantic masses of prisoners, there were also food difficulties. Many thousands of these soldiers escaped; but unfortunately, very many also died of exhaustion."

Asked what explanation he could give for the preparation of "Plan Barbarossa," the outline for the Russian invasion drafted seven months ahead of time and initialed by him, Keitel answered:

"About this, I wish at this time merely to say that after the fruitless conference between [Russian foreign commissar] Molotov and Hitler, altho diplomatic negotiations were still continuing, reports constantly reached the high command of the wehrmacht that preparations for war were noticeable on the Russian side, for example: The construction of sixty big airports near the demarkation line [in Poland]. Hitler, therefore, believed he had to take corresponding preparatory measures which led to the attack of June 22, 1941. It was a preventive-defensive war."

Didn't Figure in Plans

To the question, "were you ever in opposition to any of the fuehrer's war plans?" Keitel answered:

"I must observe that I never figured in the strategic war plans of the fuehrer. These he discussed exclusively with leadership staff of the wehrmacht [co-defendant Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl was chief of this sectional staff, while Keitel officially was chief of the wehrmacht high command]. Obviously, I had knowledge of them."

To the question of what was behind his attorney's hint last Saturday that he may have acted mercifully toward French Gen. Henri Giraud and the latter's family, altho a prosecution witness, Erwin Lahousen, swore that Keitel had demanded Giraud's murder, the accused responded:

"I personally evinced that respect for Gen. Giraud which in my opinion one owes a courageous general. It goes without saying that, on the order of the fuehrer, every means had to be employed to recapture such an important war prisoner. We then tried thru negotiations with Vichy to bring about Gen. Giraud's voluntary return to imprisonment.

"I personally gave orders that Gen. Giraud, who had come for a conference to a part of France occupied by us, be given safe conduct for his return to unoccupied France. We undertook no measures of any sort to exert pressure upon his family who lived in unoccupied France."

FREE YAMASHITA, HE DIDN'T KNOW, COUNSEL PLEADS

BY ROBERT CROMIE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 5 [Wednesday]—A charge that a guilty verdict against Gen. Yamashita as a war criminal would be equivalent to hypocritical yielding to the "mob's desire for revenge" was made this morning in closing arguments before the military trial commission which, tonight, will begin consideration of the verdict on the former Japanese commander in the Philippines.

Capt. Adolf Reel of Boston, Mass., defense counsel, in his speech in Yamashita's behalf, maintained that Yamashita did not know and could not have, that atrocities were being committed, first, because they happened in areas remote from his control and, secondly, because they were in direct violation of his orders. The mass of atrocities outside of Manila [which were largely perpetrated by naval troops], Reel said, could only be explained by some knowledge of the guerrilla situation.

Holds General Guiltless

Reel admitted there were no grounds for condoning punitive measures that included the murdering of children and other noncombatants but charged that no testimony ever had been offered which showed Yamashita had ordered or condoned these atrocities.

At the conclusion of his counsel's speech, the accused Jap general grasped Reel by the shoulders and, with obvious emotion, said in English: "Thank you, thank you, thank you."

Maj. Robert M. Kerr, Portland, Ore., chief prosecutor, will give the prosecution's summation, expected to take about two hours, this afternoon. A verdict probably will be announced Friday.

Explains Manila Situation

Capt. Milton Sandberg, New York City, earlier discussed the atrocities committed in Manila. He said the defense had shown that Yamashita did not want fighting in Manila, that he considered Manila indefensible, and that the atrocities almost wholly were perpetrated by naval troops, which were only nominally under Yamashita's control.

"No Deliberate Pattern"

As to why Yamashita did not declare Manila an open city, Sandberg said there was no way of removing supplies or the naval troops, according to Yamashita's own testimony, which "made no attempt to put the gilding of humanity on the harshness of war."

Sandberg then discussed the prosecution contention that the Manila atrocities constituted a deliberate "pattern." He said the defense saw none. Sandberg then reminded the commission that no order by Yamashita for the destruction of Manila ever was found and that the American intelligence reports showed that the Japs had urged civilians to leave the doomed city.

G. O. P. PLATFORM FOR 1946 TO BE VOTED ON TODAY

House, Senate Members' Indorsement Sought

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—Committees of house and senate Republicans today completed the draft of a declaration of principles on which it is proposed their party shall go to the country in the 1946 congressional election.

The declaration, which will be submitted for approval to the Republican membership of the house tomorrow forenoon and of the senate in the afternoon, was drafted by a committee of seven house republicans under the chairmanship of Rep. Halleck [Ind.], chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee and the Republican steering committee of the senate of which Sen. Taft [O.] is chairman. It was approved yesterday by the Republican steering committee of the house.

Meet Friday in Chicago

If adopted by the Republican membership tomorrow the declaration will be presented to the national committee, which is to meet next Friday in Chicago to map plans for the congressional election campaign.

The declaration is in effect an interim platform on which Republican candidates for congress propose to stand in 1946. It is decribed as taking sharp issue with the Democrats and particularly with the Truman administration on labor, taxes, spending, reconversion, inflation, unemployment, social welfare, demobilization, and other domestic issues as well as on certain aspects of the Truman foreign policies.

Open to Amendments

In both the senate and house Republican meetings tomorrow opportunity will be afforded for any amendment to the declaration desired by a majority of those present. Thirty-nine new Republican members of the house issued a statement last week declaring that their views are not represented by the opinions recently expressed by certain Republican leaders on controversial issues.

There is speculation whether this group will endeavor to change the declaration tomorrow or even bolt the caucus if the platform does not suit them. The moving spirits in the group of 39, however, appear to have been chiefly interested in the Pearl Harbor investigation. Their pronouncement rejected "any suggestion that our government should have acquiesced in Japan's program of aggression."

Taft Is Critical

In the conferences on the drafting of the pronouncement, Sen. Taft pulled no punches in criticism of the Truman administration.

"We [congress] are asked to enact slogans into law and leave untouched the practical problems which face the nation today," he said.

"The Republican party has an opportunity to take the lead in guiding the nation into a post-war world of freedom and prosperity. It should present forcibly its philosophy and its plans.

"Any Republican plan ought to be based primarily on liberty—liberty of the individual, liberty of the state and local government, liberty of the people to express their views and wishes thru congress against the arbitrary orders of a federal burocracy."

BRITAIN FLIES MORE TROOPS INTO BANDOENG

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 4 (AP)—British reënforcements were sent to troubled Bandoeng by air today and Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian government said he had sent representatives there to try to halt mounting disorders.

A British press statement said 40 persons, most of them Eurasians, were killed, injured, or missing after their homes were set afire in Bandoeng during the last week. It said 14 persons were locked in a house yesterday by Indonesians and burned to death.

Attacks on British headquarters in Bandoeng were dispersed yesterday by mortar fire, the British said.

An Indonesian radio station, calling itself "Revolt Bandoeng," broadcast today that British and Indonesian forces in a conference Sunday had reached an agreement for joint responsibility in maintaining order. The radio said the agreement called for British troops and Indonesian police to guarantee the safety of all Dutch and Eurasians, who were to be concentrated in one sector of Bandoeng. The broadcast appealed to Indonesian youths to cease activities against the British.

WATCH, WAR BOND, $15 STOLEN

CIO UNION STRIKE SHUTS CUDAHY PLANTS ONE DAY

Production of the Cudahy Packing company was halted yesterday by a one day strike of the United Packinghouse Workers [CIO]. The 300 employes of the plant at East Chicago, Ind., refused to work, as did 7,700 others at 11 plants in other sections of the United States. Lewis J. Clark, union president, said the workers would return to their jobs today.

The union charged that the company had stalled the workers' negotiations for a wage increase of 25 cents an hour. A company spokesman said that the company entered into the negotiations Nov. 29, continued them three days, and then asked for a postponement to investigate "necessary facts." He added that the company had given notice of willingness to resume the negotiations next Friday, but had received no reply from the union.

The union is demanding a like increase in wages thruout the industry. In an election conducted Nov. 30 by the national labor relations board the union members voted, 20 to 1, in favor of a strike if the wage increase is denied.

FATHER, ESCAPED GI, QUESTIONED ON GIRL'S DEATH

Police disclosed last night that Vernon Halversen, 20, of 1124 Wilson av., escaped army deserter, and Chester Fry, alias Brent, 47, of 4657 Magnolia av., are being held for investigation in the death of Fry's daughter, Betty, 28, who was found with her skull fractured in a passageway at 1017 Wilson av. early Sunday.

Halversen was seized in the Fry apartment Sunday evening after Detective Fred Conrad fired two shots. He admitted he was trying to burglarize the place and said he had picked up a wallet containing a key, Miss Fry's identification tag, and 1 cent in the passageway where she had been found three hours earlier. He escaped Nov. 17 from Jefferson Barracks, Mo., where he was serving five years for desertion.

POLITICIANS EYE NEW JOBS; SEEK PARTY APPROVAL

BY THOMAS MORROW

James McDermott, former alderman and now board of tax appeals member, would like to get himself on the Democratic ticket as a candidate for sheriff, according to talk yesterday in political circles. He is reported none too happy in the tax appeals and, contingent on Sheriff Mulcahy's future political move, is eyeing the sheriff's office.

Mulcahy, pending final decision from Mayor Kelly, is likely to wind up as the Democratic candidate for treasurer. These reports held their place among political gossip as equally interesting as speculation about the political future of Victor Schlaeger, county treasurer.

Hinted as Candidate for Mayor

Talk was that Schlaeger, high in the powerful Polish political faction, was prodded by advisers into making a move toward the mayoralty. Some literature was printed and mentioned Schlaeger highly as a candidate for mayor.

This did not make Mayor Kelly unusually happy, according to reports, and Schlaeger kept finding obstacles piled in his political way. He found himself being greeted as "Mr. Mayor" among some of the political folk, and reports yesterday were that he was about to accept a sanitary district trustee candidacy, be happy with it, and file his mayoralty literature away under the "mistake" file.

Meanwhile, it was reported that Warren Wright, former state treasurer, would like to get back into the political arena and run for that job again on the Republican ticket. If he is able to talk William Stratton out of making the race Wright is likely to go with or without regular party blessing.

Byrne Gets Indorsement

Atty. Emmett Byrne, who appeared before the Republican slate making committee, has the indorsement of the regular 19th ward Republican organization for the candidacy as county judge. The same organization has indorsed Mrs. W. Glenn Suthers for state senator from the 13th district or for representative at large.

Other political gossip tidbits were that Dan Serritella will seek his old state senate post, and that Comdr. Carl Stockholm, who was recalled to the navy in Washington, may run for congress next year.

ROUTS 2 BANDITS WITH A SINGLE WORD; IT'S 'NO!'

Miss Helen Tindle, 38, of 2533 Winona av., cashier at the Bertha theater, 4717 Lincoln av., routed two holdup men with a single word last night. One of the bandits pointed a pistol at her thru the ticket window while his companion stood near the curb.

"Give me the money," he said.

"No," said Miss Tindle.

The bandits had no answer for that one. They looked at one another and then walked rapidly away.

"I think it was a toy pistol," Miss Tindle told police. Then, as an after thought, "I hope."

George W. Bratfield of 6128 S. Massasoit av. yesterday reported the theft of his automobile from in front of 5700 W. 61st st.

NAME FIRM, TWO AIDS IN $1,862,704 SUBSIDY CHARGE

An indictment charging the Empire Packing company, 3840 Emerald av.; Samuel Chapman of 181 Lake Shore dr., the company president, and Fred Sans Jr. of 1400 Lake Shore dr, the treasurer, with illegally accepting $1,862,704.73 in government subsidies was returned by the federal grand jury yesterday before Judge John P. Barnes in federal District court.

Assistant United States Atty. Hugo Sonnenschein Jr. said the company filed false affidavits that it had not violated office of price administration or war food administration orders during subsidy periods from June 7, 1943, to July 7, 1945. Acknowledgment of violations would have disqualified the packers to accept subsidy payments.

The government charged the Empire company violated price regulations by accepting side payments of $6,000 from certain customers; invoicing meat at higher grades than permitted, and short weighting customers. The company was fined for price violations in 1944.

TELL HOW REDS TOOK MANCHURIA ROLLING STOCK

Locomotives Disappear, Natives Charge

BY JOSEPH HEARST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CHINCHOW [CHINHSIEN], Manchuria, Dec. 4—A two day visit to this headquarters of the Chinese Nationalist armies marching into Manchuria disclosed that many persons accuse Russia of helping herself to such supplies and heavy machinery as she desired and helping the Chinese Communists to them as well.

On the first count, the Russians, who constituted the occupying force in Manchuria after Japan's surrender, allegedly took all the locomotives and other rolling stock of the Tientsin-Mukden railroad on the division betwen the southern Manchurian border and Mukden.

It also is alleged that before they moved out of Chinchow, they sent back 500 frate car loads of food supplies, medicine, and gasoline that they found in Japanese warehouses here.

Set Warehouses Afire

What they did not take, citizens asserted, the Chinese Communists took, and then, as the Nationalist forces of Lt. Gen. Tu Li-ming approached the city, Chinese set the warehouses afire. That was more than a week ago. Not a single warehouse is left standing.

It is uncertain how much credence can be given to the charges against the Russians, who, under the terms of the China-soviet agreement, were to have held surrendered property for the Nationalist government. Many of the reports come from Japanese civilians, of whom 32,000 still live in this city of 200,000 population.

When the Chinese armies arrived at this division headquarters of the railroad, they found only a few damaged locomotives, four or five sleeper coaches, and a handful of coal and frate cars. They had expected to find approximately 150 good locomotives that during the years of Jap occupation rolled over the double tracked road, and rolling stock in proportion.

Tells of Coal Car Haul

At Hulutao, a port on Liaotung gulf that Japan developed, connecting by rail with Chinchow, a railroad man asserted the Russians took more than 450 coal cars from a branch line alone.

Automobiles also allegedly took the fancy of the Russians, with the result, natives say, that few remain of the estimated 10,000 that were in Manchuria when the Japs surrendered.

Looters Take Parts

Besides being a railroad center, Chinchow is the home of the second largest cotton mill in Manchuria. The mill was built and owned by the Japanese, and the Japanese manager, Shigemitsu Suzuki, has been kept on by the Nationalists to operate the plant for them.

This plant, apparently, was damaged only slightly. Suzuki said the Communists planned to fire it before they fled, but the Nationalists advanced too rapidly However, some machine parts and 150 sewing machines were stolen by looters after the Communists fled, he said.

Allies Publish Laws Smashing Farben Trust

BERLIN, Dec. 4 (AP)—The allied control council published laws today designed to smash the I. G. Farben trust forever and to outlaw German military training in any guise. Under the new measures the legal title to the 300 Farben plants and other assets within Germany was vested in the control council. A special committee, composed of commanders of the four occupation zones, was created to supervise liquidation of the trust.

3 GOBS CAUGHT IN CHASE AFTER BEATING GUARD

Petty Officer's Car Is Stolen in Flight

Three military prisoners at Great Lakes naval training center slugged their guard yesterday, robbed a chief petty officer of his car, and were seized after a three hour search by city, county, and state police.

The prisoners are Bernard Andrew, 19, of 2719 Washington blvd., who had been recommended held for a general court martial for being A. W. O. L. from Endicott, R. I., for 45 days; Robert Schroeder, 18, of Annandale, N. J., held in connection with the theft of a wallet from a petty officer, and Vernon Gale Harmon of Cincinnati, O., awaiting court martial for being A. W. O. L. for seven months from San Bruno, Cal.

Take Machine Gun

They were members of a work party when they overpowered and slugged their guard, Seaman Merritt Wayne Rommel, 18, of Rockford, Minn. They took his machine gun away and threw him off a truck.

They then went to Skokie highway, where they flagged down a car driven by Chief Petty Officer Arthur Rupp, 28, of St. Louis, Mo., who is assigned to the station hospital.

They took Rupp's car, left him in the road, and drove away.

Road Blockades Set Up

Radio alarms were broadcast to police squads and road blockades were set up. Shortly before 2 p. m., the men appeared in County Line rd., between Barrington and Algonquin to borrow oil from a forestry worker. He noticed a gun in the car and called police.

Sgt. Donald Barnes and Patrolman Thomas Carruthers of the state highway police, following broadcast instructions, found and overtook the fugitives in County Line rd. after a three mile chase. The prisoners were taken to the Lake county jail and held in bond of $10,000 each pending a hearing Dec. 14 before Justice of the Peace Raymond J. Reardon in Waukegan on charges of robbery.

HITS NEIGHBOR'S PUP WITH SLAT; PAYS FINE OF $5

Mrs. Stella Carson of 3153 Monroe st. was fined $5 and $5 costs on a charge of beating an animal yesterday by Judge Michael Tremko in Des Plaines st. court. A countercomplaint of disorderly conduct was discharged against Mrs. Ida Van Court of 3155 Monroe st., owner of the 3 month old Belgian puppy struck by Mrs. Carson.

Mrs. Van Court testified that last Wednesday she let the puppy out and it bounded over in Mrs. Carson's yard. Mrs. Carson picked up a lath and hit the dog over the back. Mrs. James Smith, Mrs. Van Court's niece, corroborated her aunt's testimony, but Mrs. Carson denied it.

The puppy was taken to the Animal Shelter at 513 N. Ashland av. for treatment following the hearing.

GASPERI NAMED ITALY'S PREMIER; FORMS CABINET

ROME, Dec. 4 (AP)—Alcide de Gasperi became premier of Italy today after a nine day government crisis, and was expected to announce his new cabinet soon.

The Christian Democrat leader was named premier by Crown Prince Humbert, lieutenant general of the realm, after a Liberal party conference gave up a demand for the key ministry of interior and decided to enter the government because of "great esteem for De Gasperi."

"We feel," said Party Secretary Leone Cattani, "that he is the best man in Italy at this time."

De Gasperi was expected to retain the foreign ministry portfolio which he held in the cabinet of Premier Ferruccio Parri, who resigned when his coalition government was broken up by the withdrawal of the Liberals and Christian Democrats.

Victor Emmanuel Orlando, aged World War I. premier, was understood to have been named as a vice premier, as a result of Liberal party demands that a person not affiliated with any of the six coalition parties be a member of the cabinet.

$206,500 SEIZED BY FOUR MANILA BANDITS IN JEEP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 4—Four youthful Filipino bandits were at liberty for only eight hours today after staging a 413,000 peso [$206,500] bank robbery. They were caught by Manila police headed by Provost Marshal Col. Jeremiah P. Holland of 3117 Lowe av., Chicago. The robbery was the largest and most daring in Philippine history.

The four were caught with 399,000 pesos of the loot and police were searching for the 14,000 pesos [$7,000] unaccounted for.

The bandits were tracked thru the fact they had used a stolen jeep and the fact one of them had only one arm.

The four, armed with a submachine gun and army pistols, held up two Chinese messengers of the Philippines Bank of Communications in the presence of 50 persons.

The messengers' car had driven up to the bank. The bandits drove up behind it. They held up the messengers, transferred two boxes containing the money from the bank car to the jeep, and fled. The holdup was accomplished in five minutes.

A tip that the jeep was parked in front of a house in suburban Santa Ana brought the military and police, who surrounded the place and pounced on the men, who were counting and dividing the loot.

E BOND SALES LAGGING IN 20 OF 48 STATES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—Sales of E bonds in the Victory loan today totaled 1 billion 69 million dollars—with less than a month left to reach the 2 billion dollar goal. War Finance Director Ted R. Gamble reported 20 of the 48 states are lagging in E bond sales.

Sales of all securities to individuals totaled 3 billion 946 millions, about 99 per cent of the individual sale goal, but Gamble said the E bond quota will not be met unless "selling volunteers and the buying public throw all possible weight into the balance of the drive."

Gamble said Rhode Island had sold only 76 per cent of what it was expected to have sold by the end of the fifth week of the drive, Texas only 77 per cent; Idaho, 79; Kentucky, 80; Arkansas and Maryland, 83; Florida, 86; Georgia and Louisiana, 87; Delaware, 89; Arizona, 90; Massachusetts, 93; Michigan, 94; Tennessee, northern California, and Missouri, 95; Ohio, 96; Pennsylvania and South Carolina, 98; Utah and southern California, 99 per cent. Highest above the level of expected sales was North Dakota with 237 per cent.

Wieboldt Clerks Hit 11 Million

Five thousand employes of Wieboldt's stores yesterday climaxed their Victory bond campaign by selling $11,125,000 worth of bonds, an official of the store reported. The employes' goal had been $1,500,000. Since Pearl Harbor the stores have sold $60,069,837 in bonds.

ARAGON SWAYS AS 1,200 IN 4-H CLUB SWING OUT

Champs Taste Night Life; Are Good at That, Too

BY GLADYS PRIDDY

Twelve hundred 4-H club representatives tried a little Chicago night life last night and showed they were good at that, too.

They took over the Aragon ballroom, where the Spool Cotton company entertained them. Acquaintances of only a few days at the 24th national 4-H Club congress, they paired off quickly and swung into a jitterbug Virginia Reel that was strictly solid. They also swaggered thru a grand march in ultra-sophistication and did some smooth ballroom dancing. The young people, mostly 17 and 18 year olds, came from every state in the union and from Canada, Puerto Rico, Venezuela, and Chile.

Health Champions Named

The party was the climax of a day of announcements of contest winners, capped by dinner at which the contestants were entertained by their various sponsors.

Two boys and two girls [both brunettes] who were named national 4-H health champions, credited milk, eggs, spinach, sleep and plenty of farm chores for their success.

They are: Eleanor E. Chapman, 17, of Centerburg, O.; Louise Hale, 17, Randlett, Okla.; John Harold Savoy, 17, Cameron, La., and Harris Reinboldt, 16, Marshall, Minn. They were chosen on a basis of submitted records and dental and physical examinations from a field of 12 state winners of each sex.

Savoy, who lacks an inch of being 6 feet tall, thinks his health score of 99.8 points missed perfection because of "a spot of athlete's foot" and for a filling in a tooth.

Six Cooks Win Scholarships

Reinboldt, a high school senior, has ambitions to take over the home farm when he graduates. Miss Chapman, a senior, hopes to become a medical technologist, and Miss Hale, a junior, plans a nursery career.

Good cooks came in sixes yesterday when winners of the $200 scholarships in the food preparation contest were announced as: Raecille Parker, 19, Columbus, Ga.; Jan Nelson, 17, Bloomington, Ind., Lois Keller, 18, Middletown, Md.; Virginia A. Chesborough, 21, Henning, Minn.; Mrs. Cora Jean Applegate Van Dyke, 19, Helena, Mont., and Rosie L. Garrett, 18, Weleetka, Okla.

Mrs. Van Dyke, a bride of five months, said her husband never compliments her cooking but has gained 23 pounds on it.

CLEARS FIREMEN OF THEFTS FROM VICTIM OF BLAZE

Jack Rubens, chief investigator for the public administrator, yesterday cleared firemen of blame for any possible thefts of money or securities from the home of Mrs. Huldah Sittig, 81, who was fatally burned in a fire in her apartment at 2247 Armitage av. Oct. 13. Altho boys who were at the fire had reported having turned over bundles of paper money to police, only $39.66 was deposited in the coroner's office, Rubens said.

The 21 firemen present at the fire were questioned by Rubens and Marshal Anthony J. Mullaney in the office of Fire Commissioner Corrigan. They testified they had seen no money except $8 contained in a charred purse, which they said they turned over to police.

Eight policemen of the Shakespeare av. station who were at the scene will appear in Probate court Friday morning on citations obtained by John T. Dempsey, public administrator.

Denies She Stole Sailor's $1,600 in a Tourist Cabin

Mrs. Eleanor Adams McKay, 22, of Millington, Kendall county, pleaded not guilty yesterday before Judge Ralph J. Dady in the Lake County Circuit court to a charge of grand larceny. She was accused of taking $1,600 from Chief Petty Officer Frederick Gorman Guith of Flint, Mich., in a tourist cabin near Wauconda, Lake county, last Nov. 14. She was seized Nov. 25 in Superior, Wis., and admitted, State's Atty. Harry A. Hall said, taking the money and $4,000 in travelers' checks which she destroyed. She had $1,010 in her possession when arrested.

U. S. AIMS TO EXPORT BILLION POUNDS OF MEAT DURING 1946

This nation can, and probably will, ship one billion 250 million pounds of meat abroad next year and still Americans may have the meat they want, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson told a luncheon meeting of 700 Rotarians in the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

"Packers now are setting aside 30 million pounds of meat each week for the government and the department of agriculture is getting ready to furnish needy nations and the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration 25 million pounds a week if they need it," Anderson said.

Meat rationing was ended only when the department was convinced civilians would get the meat they wanted and the nation's pledge to keep the people in Europe from starving could be fulfilled, he said. The pre-war consumption of meat in the United States was 125.6 pounds per capita. Now it is 148 pounds.

AIR LINER MAKES LINDY'S FLIGHT A TAXI JAUNT

BY DAVID DARRAH
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Dec. 4—Charles A. Lindbergh's grand adventure in soloing from New York to Paris 18 years ago became a simple commercial trans-Atlantic taxi trip for 23 passengers today. The giant Lockheed Constellation plane, Paris Sky Chief, broke three world's records and linked Washington, D. C., with Paris in 12 hours and 47 minutes of flight.

The plane broke the record for the Washington to Paris flight, 3,870 miles, with an average speed of 316 miles per hour. The fastest previous time was more than 20 hours made last spring.

The Washington to Ireland record was broken with a time of 11 hours 44 minutes, and the Gander, Newfoundland, to Ireland record with a time of 6 hours 27 minutes.

Refueled in Ireland

On its trial run of the first commercial flight since the war, the four engined airliner slipped gracefully down on Orly airfield, south of Paris, at 11:24 o'clock this morning [5:24 a. m. Chicago time], 14 hours and 47 minutes after leaving Washington. The flying time was 12 hours and 47 minutes. The ship made a brief landing to refuel in Ireland.

The Paris Sky Chief's flight heralded Washington to Paris triweekly service for passengers beginning Jan. 1, and, later, daily service. The service will be exploited jointly by Transcontinental and Western Air [Trans World Airlines] and a French company, with the United States furnishing the Constellation planes.

The Constellation cut an hour and 52 minutes from the schedule set for it.

Flies at 17,000 Feet

The sky giant was flown by Capt. Harold F. Blackburn. In addition to the 23 passengers, it carried a crew of 10. It flew at 17,000 feet for most of the 3,870 miles.

French and American officials and two detachments of French troops were at Orly to welcome the plane. Robert Hannegan, United States postmaster general, one of the passengers, was greeted by France's postmaster general, Eugene Thomas; Hannegan handed to Thomas a million units of penicillin for use in French hospitals. The penicillin was sent by American Relief for France in Boston, Mass.

The Paris Sky Chief is expected to take off on Friday for Washington.

U. S. WILL SHIP FOOD, RAISE GERMAN RATION

STUTTGART, Germany, Dec. 4 (AP)—The United States intends to move enough food into Germany to assure an average daily ration of 1,550 calories for every one, Lt. Gen. Lucius C. Clay, American military governor for Germany, said today.

"Hunger and starvation have never been the United States' objective," Clay told the German officials in the American zone. "We will approve with the start of the Jan. 1 ration period a 1,550 calory average ration for all. My government will support this by sending food from the United States, the cost of which will be paid for when Germany is able to pay."

The German average civilian ration had been set last October by the American military government at 1,345 calories.

MAYOR'S SON, 19, IS SICK AFTER TRIP TO LONDON

Joseph Kelly, 19, son of Mayor Kelly, who accompanied his father on the American Air Lines flagship Chicago to London and return, was in Passavant Memorial hospital yesterday suffering from a severe case of jaundice and physical breakdown as a result of the trip. The mayor said the youth lost 25 pounds.

Mayor Kelly said the jaundice is a recurring illness caused by an injured liver incurred at birth. He said his son, only recently discharged, had been in three navy hospitals for the same illness while in service.

"He was very ill on the flight home," Mayor Kelly said.

FINES 13 FOOD DEALERS $50 EACH

Judge Michael Feinberg in Circuit court yesterday entered injunctions against 16 retail food dealers whom the office of price administration accused of violating ceiling prices. Judge Feinberg fined 13 of the food dealers $50 each, and fined one $25.

"I told you if he got into mischief to suggest something else—not something WORSE."

'I RECKON' ISN'T CHICAGO LINGO, LONDONERS TOLD

Kelly Aid Criticizes British Writers

LONDON, Dec. 4 [Reuters]—London newspaper reporters today came in for severe criticism from J. M. Cleary, Chicago advertising executive, who is in London as a member of the delegation which wants Chicago to be the headquarters of the united nations organization.

James M. Cleary

At his suite in the Savoy hotel today, he said: "Thruout Mayor Kelly's stay in London I watched him being interviewed many times by London newspaper representatives.

"I was astonished to find that in several big daily newspapers he was misquoted and in some cases the kind of remark that Britons think Americans make was substituted for his real words.

"One newspaper quoted Mayor Kelly as saying 'I reckon'—a phrase which he didn't use. Americans reading that would just laugh."

Objects to Tone

Cleary is not very happy about the light tone which he says London's newspapers have adopted in writing up the American delegation's visits to London to present their claims to the UNO preparatory commission committee. "Americans feel quite serious about the future of the UNO headquarters," he said, "but London newspapers insist on writing about them lightly and with editorial-style comments." He added, "I should have thought that lack of news space [daily newspapers here are limited to four pages] would force them to stick to facts."

RED HAWTHORNE BERRIES ENLIVEN CITY'S DRAB FALL

The drab colors of fall in the city's parks are relieved by one cheery Christmas note which has attracted many comments. The bright spot among the browns and blacks of the trees and shrubs are the red berries still clinging to the many hawthorne trees in the parks. Some of the best examples of this holiday coloring may be found in Columbus park, which contains many different varieties of hawthornes and wild crab apple trees. The small, round red fruits are clustered thickly on the thorn studded branches, presenting a pleasing color contrast for passers-by.

HANGS SELF IN BASEMENT

Lawrence Rybarczyk, 55, of 826 W. 54th st., who was unemployed, was found hanged yesterday in the basement of his apartment building. His son, Theodore, occupant of another apartment in the building, told police he knew of no reason why his father should take his own life.

TRUMAN'S SURE CURE FOR LABOR STRIFE

Mr. Truman has thought up a strike discourager. He described it in a message sent to congress on Monday. His plan has just enough plausibility about it, just enough of the air of impartiality, to impress the thoughtless. In reality there isn't much in it.

The President has two recommendations. The first, intended to end the existing General Motors strike, invites the members of the union to go back to work while a fact finding commission makes its inquiry and publishes its report. It remains to be seen if the union will accept the suggestion and if the steel workers to whom the same offer is held out will postpone their strike.

For the long pull the President asks congress to pass a law forbidding major strikes in basic industries until after a Presidential fact finding commission has inquired and reported. The commission would be given the power to subpena witnesses and records and take testimony under oath.

All of this would make sense if it were true that the conflict between General Motors and the Auto Workers' union [and the similar conflicts which are impending in other industries] arose over disagreement about facts. In such circumstances a fact finding commission might have something to contribute.

In truth the conflict is not over facts but over principles. The union says that General Motors should pay much higher wages because it has made a lot of money and is going to make a lot more. General Motors takes the position that it can't raise wages above a certain point rejected by the union unless it can also raise the prices at which its products are sold, which OPA won't let it do. Wages, the company implies, cannot be justly determined without reference to the supply and demand for labor.

Now obviously these positions are in conflict and it isn't, in any significant sense, a conflict over facts. The company can concede the union's facts, and the union can concede the company's, and the essential conflict will remain. It follows that a fact finding commission that merely finds facts cannot resolve the controversy.

In truth Mr. Truman's commission, before it began looking for facts, would have to decide what kinds of facts it was looking for. The moment it reached a decision on that point it would have ceased to be a fact finding commission and become a principle determining commission. It would have decided that the company's, or the union's, or some other theory of a just wage was the right one and it would then proceed to find the facts which its theory would require it to know.

Mr. Truman's commission is therefore misnamed. What he really proposes is that employers and employes and congress all abdicate whatever rights they may have in the determination of labor policies and hand the whole job over to a commission to be appointed by the President and to be responsible to nobody. Mr. Truman hopes that his commission will have so much prestige that everybody will gladly accept its conclusions as just and valid.

We doubt that a fact finding commission's judgment would command such great respect. If the members of the commission are chosen from within the industry they may understand its problems, but they cannot be impartial. If they are chosen from outside they won't know the industry's subtleties and they can't hope to overcome their ignorance in a few brief weeks.

In effect Mr. Truman is aiming a blow at freedom of contract and freedom of collective bargaining. The right to bargain, whether individually or collectively, implies, necessarily, the right to refuse to agree on terms. Mr. Truman thinks he has hit upon a device which will achieve compulsion without seeming to be compulsory. In fact, if it is compulsion, it's wrong in principle; and if it isn't compulsion it offers nothing.

There are a few things Mr. Truman and state and local officials can do to alleviate labor trouble. First and foremost is to insist that strikes be conducted without violence or any other kind of coercion. That is a proper function of government. Indeed, it is the first and most important reason for the existence of government. If Mr. Truman had remembered this and acted accordingly, instead of making his speech telling labor that it can have much higher wages without increasing prices, many of his present difficulties would not be plaguing him.

CLEARING THE PIER

News that the navy department is to give immediate consideration to proposals that it move its radio school from Navy pier is encouraging. It had originally been announced that the navy would retain the pier thru next year. The Chicago convention bureau protested that continued occupancy of the pier would deprive the city of several large conventions and trade expositions which had been scheduled for the pier, the only place in Chicago where they could be held.

We hope that the navy will come to a decision quickly so that the trade groups which planned to come here will not settle upon some other city because of the uncertainty of obtaining suitable accommodations in Chicago. As we said in an editorial Nov. 17, the navy can easily transfer its school to one of the many idle war plants around Chicago if facilities at Glenview or Great Lakes are not adequate. During the war the navy's needs came first. Now the first priority should go to the restoration of normal business and incentives to create jobs.

SMUGGLING ATOM BOMBS

Mr. Wilkinson's letter in the Voice of the People today points to the danger that potential enemy states, when armed with the atomic bomb, may seek to smuggle bombs into the country in diplomatic luggage, which is immune to search. The bombs are relatively small and could be brought here in sections, concealed in diplomatic pouches and personal luggage. Radioactive material, of course, would have to be insulated to protect the handlers. Once inside America, the bombs could be assembled, planted near key industrial and military objectives, and detonated at will.

Scientists themselves have recognized this possibility. Congress should take account of it while we still have time. So far as is known, it will be several years before any other nation can get into the production of atomic bombs. Legislation ought to be enacted now making all diplomatic luggage subject to search. We have nothing to lose by such action. We aren't planning to use the atomic weapon against any one, and if other nations reciprocated by searching the luggage of our diplomats and couriers, they would not be enlightened much. Our diplomacy is so childish that any confidential papers passing between Washington and its diplomatic outposts hardly warrant the protection of secrecy. We could readily submit them to examination in return for similar privileges and for the positive benefit of protecting ourselves against treachery.

LASKI AMONG THE ALIENS

Altho the Labor party, of which he is chairman, is now the government of England, the advice of Prof. Harold Laski is more often ignored than accepted by his political associates. This does not deter the presumptuous professor from peddling in this country the doctrines for which he can find only limited acceptance at home.

He has just landed in alien New York and has issued his prescription for our national conduct at a public meeting sponsored by Mrs. Roosevelt and other people equally foreign minded and indifferent to American interests. Prof. Laski has one thing in common with the British aristocracy which he, presumably, is pledged to level. That is their gall.

We must, this volunteer secretary of state assures us, yield our national sovereignty in order to get rid of war and power politics. He fails to assure us that we can also escape tyranny in that way, and, obviously, we cannot. A world government would be a convenient instrument for imposing British financial tyranny or Russian political tyranny upon the United States, without having to defeat this country in war.

Prof. Laski also asserts that our American position of economic and political liberty is the road to ruin. "Free enterprise and market economy," he said, "mean war; socialism and planned economy mean peace."

This is a statement made without proof. Indeed, all of the evidence controverts it. State socialism or its brother, totalitarianism, and planned economy have consistently been the instruments of the war makers, not the peace seekers. Hitler went for them root, trunk, and branch; Mussolini went for them; the war lords of Japan went for them, and Prof. Laski's pal, Stalin, who is the most active practitioner of power politics and aggression left in the world, is also the most thoro practitioner of socialism and planned economy.

Incidentally, the aggressors didn't find planned economy any more effective in winning wars than they found it satisfying the peace time wants of their people.

Prof. Laski cannot argue that this association of planned economy with aggression and war making is any accident of personalities or circumstances. It is, on the contrary, fundamental in the system that he recommends.

Competition for foreign markets is often regarded as a cause of war. In a free market, free enterprise system, the competitors are individuals. They may find their individual interests hindered by competition by another nation or the merchants of another nation, but, even so, they will, more frequently than not, have difficulty in persuading their fellow citizens that their personal grievance is ground for war. Not so in a planned economy. The government itself conducts the foreign trade. It has available all of its powers to advance its interests in those fields, and those powers include, of course, the war making power.

Planned economy means quotas and other restrictions on imports. It means cartels. It means currency blocs and currency restrictions and, in the end, different varieties of phony money designed to evade the simple laws of supply and demand. Those are all war breeders. They are also inescapable in planned economy.

Prof. Laski should go back to London and peddle his bill of goods there. We should dislike seeing the British adopt them, because we know that it will injure the British and thereby injure the whole world, but we much prefer to see the British suffer than to see the American people made guinea pigs for his nostrums.

THE "LEBENSRAUM" MAN

For an estimate of the character and career of Karl Haushofer, the German political geographer who narrowly escaped an indictment to appear before the Nuremberg war guilt tribunal, see Stefan Zweig's "The World of Yesterday," an autobiography, published in 1943. The gifted Austrian man of letters, himself a sufferer from nazi racial persecution, knew the geopolitician, read his books as they appeared without suspicion of a sinister purpose, and regarded him as not involved in the nazi plans, in spite of the fact that he supplied Hitler with the "Lebensraum" slogan.

* * *

"One of Haushofer's pupils," Zweig wrote, "had been Rudolph Hess, and he brought about the connection. Hitler, tho himself far from receptive to unfamiliar ideas, possessed from the outset the instinct to appropriate whatever might serve his personal ambitions. Therefore National Socialist politics accepted geopolitics and pumped it dry."

* * *

"As far as I know," Zweig continued, "Haushofer never held a prominent position in the party; perhaps he was never a party member. . . . But there can be no doubt that it was his theories, rather than any of Hitler's most rabid advisers, which either consciously or unconsciously drove the aggressive policy of National Socialism from the narrow national to the universal."

Incidentally, Zweig points out that Haushofer's wife was of Jewish descent and "his talented and very agreeable sons could never have met the requirements of the Nuremberg Jewish laws."

SOLDIERS GOING HOME

Now let the jungle vine, looping, tenuous,
Drape living emerald over the tank hatch,
And let the white wave, spuming, spray the landing craft
Beached forever on the conquered strand.

Rust and blood surrender to fundamentals:
Wind, sea, rain, and the breathing leaf.
Mark how the nipa grass marches triumphant
Over the airports, abandoned, silent under the stars.

Wide is the sea Balboa called the Peaceful
And we have left our mark on many places,
Tracing the westward trail that reaches
From the beaches of Oahu to Honshu.

We leave our bridges over forgotten rivers,
Our concrete floors in coconut groves,
And our slangy names on places, like
"Suicide hill" and "Iron Bottom bay."

We fold the maps of great campaigns,
We pass the records to historians.
We have finished and we are tired—
War is work, not glory. Timosius

C. B. writes: "I recently returned with a group of sailors from Japan to the Great Lakes separation center for discharge under the point system. Most of us had from 18 to 30 months of duty in the Pacific. We were told when we left our ship that we would receive 30 days' leave before discharge and many men had such orders in their records. At Great Lakes the officers professed ignorance of this and told us it no longer was the policy of the navy to give leave to enlisted men who were being discharged. We were not allowed to see the commanding officer, and the legal officer refused to represent us in our protest. We know that commissioned officers get terminal leave with full pay and allowances at the rate of 30 days for each year of service, if they have not used up their leave. If I had been an officer I would have been entitled to over 60 days' leave. I have been told that the army has reversed this policy and that men returning for discharge are given furloughs. Is this true and is there anything we can do to get compensation for the leave we had coming?"

There is nothing an enlisted man can do to obtain pay for furlough or leave time he did not or could not get when in service. It is true that officers are allowed 30 days' leave a year and that upon separation or retirement they get terminal leave equal to unexpended leave time and that they draw full pay and allowances. Proposal has been made to congress that enlisted men be paid for the leaves they did not get. Some time ago leaves were given to men awaiting separation but not because they were entitled to them. It was a question of convenience because separation centers could not process them fast enough. Now they can.

ALLERGIC SYMPTOMS FROM DRUGS

ALLERGY to drugs may occur just as it does to foods, pollen, dust, and molds. This applies whether they are ingested, inhaled, or injected. Among the offenders may be headache remedies, cough sedatives, sleeping tablets, nose drops, salves, suppositories, and mouth washes.

There is a difference between this type of reaction and poisoning from overdosage. Toxic effects are due to the pharmacological action of the chemical. For example, large doses of quinine may give rise to dizziness, ringing in the ears, or gastro-intestinal upsets. On the other hand, even tiny amounts —in sensitive individuals—will result in hives, skin eruptions, asthma, sneezing, or abdominal pain.

Among popular preparations are those containing aspirin, codeine, belladonna, creosote, bromides and iodides, phenolphthalein, and the sulfonamides. Occasionally penicillin is responsible. The incidence of such a response is comparatively low, otherwise many of our most potent agents in the fight against diseases could not attain the wide use they deserve. Fortunately, if one form of sulfa is a troublemaker, another formula may prove innocuous.

While manifestations are usually similar, certain medications are prone to produce characteristic pictures. Asthma and hives are more likely to follow the employment of aspirin while barbiturates and arsenicals lead to dermatitis. Bromides and iodides may induce a typical acne which will clear promptly on discontinuing the substance. Phenolphthalein, a common ingredient of many laxatives and often used as a pink coloring agent in foods and drinks, may result in what is known as "a fixed drug eruption." As the name implies, blemishes appear in exactly the same spot each time the victim is exposed to the product. Fever and a generalized skin outbreak may be observed after taking one of the sulfas and the blood changes that are sometimes noted are also thought to be on an allergic basis.

How does one become sensitized? The tendency is an individual trait, with a strong hereditary element just as in hay fever and urticaria. Skin tests to detect the offender are not always successful. It is believed that the drug itself is not the excitant but that on entry into the tissues of the susceptible person, it combines with body proteins to form a new substance which is the real instigator.

One of the most unusual features of this disorder is that there exists originally a period of tolerance during which the drug may be employed with impunity. Then suddenly discomfort ensues when it is used. This is most strikingly illustrated in those who have become sensitized to aspirin. Up to a certain time they are able to tolerate it. Then, without warning, asthmatic distress is experienced when as little as a grain is placed on the tongue.

Treatment consists principally in avoidance. For the relief of manifestations already present, elimination of the irritant from the body may be attempted. Adrenalin and ephedrine counteract asthma and hives. Soothing lotions and baths of starch or oatmeal often alleviate skin eruptions.

OBESITY AFTER SURGERY

G. H. writes: Why is weight gained rapidly after an operation?

REPLY

Most individuals won't—unless they eat too much. On the other hand, if certain glands were removed, this may be a factor. In addition, sometimes an infected structure will keep the patient thin. After it is eradicated, the body has a chance to react normally to nutrition.

NERVES AND HEART

Mrs. M. P. writes: Can extreme nervousness for a number of years damage the heart muscle?

REPLY

No, except that as we grow older the additional strain may not be borne as well. On the other hand, many nervous persons live longer because they are more concerned about their health and take better care of themselves.

SORE NOSE

W. E. writes: What causes pain in the nose?

REPLY

In the absence of a cold, infection from a boil, pimple, or ingrown hair may be investigated. Neuralgia and sinus trouble are less frequently responsible.

CUTTING THE NERVE

Mrs. R. writes: Is surgery of any value in Meniere's disease?

REPLY

Yes, as a last resort in those cases that defy conservative treatment.

Witches on Christmas?

You may think you hang holly in your windows at Christmas for decoration, but Carl B. Roden, librarian, says otherwise. Mr. Roden, who will meet Santa Claus half way tomorrow noon at the public library by discussing the theory and practice of Christmas, contends holly is to keep the witches away.

Mr. Roden has been delving around in his books again and has come up with well authenticated notions that many of our Christmas customs are deeply rooted in pagan folklore. Altho Christmas is the name given by the Catholic church to the Christ mass, the feast celebrated in honor of the birth of Christ, Dec. 25 has always been a fête day—the winter solstice, the Roman saturnalia, the Scandinavian Yule, the Jewish festival of lights.

Christmas greens were used long ago by the pagan Romans, who decorated growing evergreens with tiny masks to insure fertility. Holly was used by the Druids of England long before the birth of Christ, and considered by them a sacred plant because it was always green. It was hung at windows and doors to ward off evil spirits. Mistletoe, the only green which has never been accepted by the Christian church, for centuries has been regarded as a protection against illness and evil.

The burning Yule log was a symbol of the return of the sun and was dragged ceremoniously to the family hearth, where it was drenched with wine and kindled with a brand saved from the preceding year. If flames crackled forth, it portended good luck for the coming year. If the log failed to fire immediately, it was an omen of ill. Candles were considered a symbol of enlightenment and were molded long enough to burn the night thru. In Christian Ireland a burning candle was placed in the window so the Christ child might find His way home. Only girls with the name of Mary were allowed to snuff them.

The giving of gifts and the hanging of stockings was instituted by St. Nicholas, who originally appeared in Europe as an ascetic, white bearded oldster on horseback, carrying gifts for good children, switches for bad. Pelznickle, a servant from the demon world, sometimes accompanied him, clad always in a fur coat and carrying a strap or switch. St. Nicholas' day was celebrated on Dec. 6, and not until the Dutch came to America did he become the patron saint of Christmas holidays here. Practical people, they decided two days of gift giving was too much in one month and merged the day of Santa Nikalaus with Christmas day.

Clement Clark Moore's "'Twas the Night Before Christmas," written in 1822, first depicted Santa Claus as a merry, jovial old thing, but all pictures of him looked as Dutch as Father Knickerbocker until Thomas Nast went to work on him in 1863. Nast, better known as the originator of the Democratic donkey, the Tammany tiger, and the Republican elephant, first drew Santa Claus as a fat, fur clad saint behind a team of reindeer.

Our Christmas feasting today is pallid compared to what it once was. Turkey was not introduced in England until 1520 and was a mild substitute for the traditional boar's head garlanded with rosemary and laurel or for the more exotic roasted peacock. The latter was carefully skinned so its plumage remained intact and then roasted. Then the feathers were draped back over it [a bit of fakery the Drake hotel still effects with pheasants], the bill gilded, a small sponge saturated with spirits placed between it and lighted as the whole was carted in.

Mince pie, by the way, was eaten in the 16th century as a symbol of the riches brought by the three wise men. It was filled with rich spices and products brought from the east. The filling was cut into small pieces. Because of this, the pie was called a shrid or shredded pie. Later the word was changed to minced, meaning merely finely cut. Its crust at first was baked in the form of a manger. Later the crust was latticed. This was said to represent the hayrack of the stable where Christ was born. Mr. Roden's interest in these, however, is purely academic. He goes for cranberry pie with what is known as a window crust.

THE BOMB AND DIPLOMATIC IMMUNITY

Van Wert, O., Nov. 21—The public thinks of atomic bombs in terms of aerial warfare. How many realize that atomic bombs are so small that they can be brought into our country in diplomatic luggage, which we may not inspect; that 50 to 75 of these bombs can be set off at an appointed time in the hearts of key cities, and in a space of a few seconds totally destroy our ability or even desire to wage a war of any kind? And quite regardless of any program of compulsory military training. The general did not tell us about this.

Shall we place our reliance in compulsory military training when this type of war is as obsolete as the bow and arrow? Again we face a Pearl Harbor about which our leaders are afraid to speak.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 30—War time driving restrictions prompted some motorists to store their cars for the duration. Others, because of service in the armed forces, put their cars on blocks.

Such was the case of the car bearing 1942 license plates No. 1-078-222 recently reported in your column by E. Bliss as being driven about town. The car is one that has just come out of storage. Records show the owner's application for 1945 plates was validated Nov. 2 and plates were mailed Nov. 5. The owner, when contacted by a representative from this office, had the plates in his car and expressed regret that he had not taken the time to affix them.

HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

TOKYO, Nov. 21—What we would like to know is: Why is it so important that the reënlistees that have been overseas only a month have priority over eligible dischargees in getting home for Christmas? COMMITTEEMAN SCHROEDER

Chicago, Nov. 28—I know of no editorial that spoke more directly and truthfully to Republicans than "Dewey Falls Again" in The Tribune of Nov. 25. In this day of double talking and dealing among Republicans we need the dose of straight thinking these editorials convey.

As a business and civic leader who is intensely interested in the election of Republicans who will think and act like Americans, may I inquire just where has Illinois' brilliant but baffling national committeeman, Werner Schroeder, been while the party in the county and nationally is being sold down the river? At the national committee meeting at Indianapolis a year ago, in spite of the many suggestions, including your own, that Mr. Dewey's personal chairman, Brownell, be retired, Schroeder voted and worked for his retention. He was with him then as he is for him now because he has always believed it "smart politics" to play the men in control regardless of their beliefs. In so doing, of course, he is looking out for his personal advantage rather than that of the party he is supposed to serve.

What is really needed in Illinois is a new broom to get rid of those trimmers who have fed too long at the public trough to be useful to a reborn, rejuvenated Republican party.

DENIES THERE IS CRIME WAVE IN U. S. BERLIN ZONE

No Sign of Resistance, Says Officer

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Dec. 4—Dispatches printed in the United States describing a Berlin crime wave, attacks on American soldiers, sniping at foreigners, a revived German youth movement and the birth of an underground, resistance movement were branded as untrue today by Col. W. E. Heimlich, who, as intelligence officer of the United States garrison here, handles all such cases.

"Since our arrival in Berlin July 3, there has not been a single case where an American soldier was attacked," Heimlich said, "altho there have been hundreds where Yanks attacked Germans.

No Resistance Anywhere

There has been no werewolf activity; there has not been one case of wire stretching [a cable pulled taut across the road at night to decapitate automobile occupants or wreck a car]; there have been only two cases of wire cutting, and those might have been done inadvertently by our own people. There has been no sign of any resistance anywhere, and no indication of any underground movement and no concealed weapons have been found."

The United States maintains a security officer in every German police station in the American sector. This officer receives a duplicate report of every case of violence, theft, or other crime handled by local authorities. Every case which might involve Americans or army property or the safety of the garrison is investigated by an American counter-intelligence unit.

Raid 20,000 Homes

Last Sunday, security authorities raided 20,000 homes as a checkup. They arrested 300 German civilians, all on trivial charges, such as not carrying identification papers, or documents not being in order.

Army officials dismiss reports that young Germans have secretly organized to terrorize women who fraternize with Americans with the explanation: "Naturally there are Germans who get jealous when their wives and girl friends run around with GIs, and they probably threaten them. But there has been no case yet where they actually did anything."

REVEAL MIKADO ATTENDED TWO WAR MEETINGS

TOKYO, Dec. 5 [Wednesday] (AP)—Late in 1941 at the imperial palace, Emperor Hirohito attended at least two highly secret conferences on war with the United States and Britain—a war on which Japan virtually decided three months before Pearl Harbor, Japanese participants disclosed today.

The first conference was the momentous imperial conference of Sept. 6 at which it was decided that Japan would begin preparing for war in the middle of October unless there was marked improvement in negotiations at Washington, D. C.

Retired Gen. Toshizo Nishio told the Associated Press about a second meeting, held late in November or early in December when the emperor informed the supreme war council thru the chiefs of staff that "Japan might have to fight if things didn't improve."

CLAIMS RUSSIA OFFERS 'PRIVATE DEAL' TO IRAN

TEHRAN, Iran, Dec. 4 (AP)—Premier Hakimi threatened today to resign unless the Azerbaijan province dispute was settled by direct negotiation with Russia. A foreign office spokesman later said a soviet representative in Tehran had made a "private proposal" concerning the crisis in troubled northwest Iran.

The spokesman said the cabinet had been called into emergency session to consider the soviet proposal. This formula was said to provide that the Russians would meet certain Iranian wishes if Iran treated the Azerbaijan question as a matter concerning only Iran and the soviet union.

Insisting on direct negotiation with the Russians, Hakimi refused to attend a session of parliament to report on Azerbaijan, where the government charges rebels have started a separatist movement. Moscow has refused an Iranian demand for permission to move Iranian troops into Azerbaijan, one of the northern areas occupied by soviet forces.

See Appeasement Regime

Parliament members said Hakimi's resignation undoubtedly would be followed by formation of an appeasement government headed by former Premier Ghavam Sultaneh, described as pro-soviet.

A government spokesman said the new turn of events was influenced by the election of a council in Azerbaijan which would establish a new government in the province on Thursday. Formation of an Azerbaijan militia was reported to have started.

[In Moscow Tass dispatches, based upon reports in Tehran newspapers, said mass meetings of workers, peasants, and persons of all classes were sweeping parts of northern Iran, denouncing persecution of democratic organizations and urging closer soviet-Iranian relations.]

One parliamentary deputy, a member of the Tuden party which supports Azerbaijan claims for independence, asserted that Gen. Ibraham Arfaa, Iranian army chief of staff, and Sayyed Ziad, leader of the National Will party, were preparing a "putsch" in Tehran, with support of the British.

Fear Further Intervention

The deputy said the crisis might become a pretext for further foreign intervention in Iran.

Authoritative sources said the nations of the Arab league were considering the advisability of promising assistance to the Iranian government.

High govenment circles said Russia would be pleased if a new government was set up by Sultaneh, and added that it would be a major diplomatic defeat for Britain and the United States.

Dec. 5—Confirm Gold Discovery

IN 1848 sensational stories kept drifting back east from the United States' newly acquired territories near the Pacific. Gold could be scooped from the streams of California almost as easily as sand from the sea. People who hardly had a dollar to their name were getting rich in a day. Ships feared to enter a western harbor, for their crews would desert as one and go off to the gold fields.

President James K. Polk took official cognizance of this rumor in his message to congress of Dec. 5, 1848. While he did not confirm the wilder tales, and while he kept his language sober and restrained, he left no doubt in the minds of stay-at-home Americans that there was a strong element of truth in the stories they had heard.

"The explorations already made," the message read, "warrant the belief that the supply is very large and that gold is found at various places in an extensive district."

Polk did not play down the dangers to orderly business and military discipline that the gold rush carried with it.

"All other pursuits but that of searching for the precious metals have been abandoned," he said. "Nearly the whole of the male population of the country have gone to the gold districts . . . Our commanding officer there entertains apprehensions that soldiers cannot be kept in the public service without a large increase of pay. Desertions in his command have become frequent."

Not primarily because of the President's message, but because the gold fever is one of the most contagious of all disorders, the whole country—even the settled and relatively conservative east—began sending its sons west. It is estimated that 60,000 Americans reached the coast in the gold rush of '49. In July of 1850, San Francisco bay held 500 ships which had been deserted by their crews.

Policeman Shoots Manager of Earl Hines Orchestra

Eric Illidge, 45, Negro, New York, manager of the Earl [Father] Hines orchestra, was shot in the right shoulder by Policeman Raymond Reaker of the stolen automobile detail early today in the bar of the El Grotto ballroom, 6412 Cottage Grove av., where the orchestra is playing. Reaker and another policeman were investigating a disturbance when, Reaker said, Illidge struck him with a gun. Illidge was taken to Provident hospital.

INDIA TO BE FREE, BUT DON'T FORCE US, SAYS BRITAIN

LONDON, Dec. 4 (AP)—The British government reaffirmed today its promise of self-rule for India, but warned that it would resist any attempt to resolve the issue by force.

In a statement of policy read in both houses of parliament, the Labor government promised to turn the reins over to the Indians when a suitable constitution is adopted. But establishment of a constituent assembly can scarcely be contemplated before the Indian elections next spring, the statement said.

Meanwhile, a non-partisan parliamentary committee will be sent to India immediately to make observations and draft unofficial recommendations to the British government.

Pethick-Lawrence, secretary of state for India, and Herbert Morrison, lord president of council, read the statement in the house of lords and commons, respectively.

In the debate which followed, Morrison was asked whether India—once it was granted self-government—would be permitted to withdraw from the British commonwealth if its leaders so desired. He replied that Britain would not impose any restriction on the power of India to decide her future.

BOY CHARGES KIDNAPING; TRIO FACES CHARGES

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 4 [Special]—Federal charges of transporting a stolen automobile across a state line were placed tonight against three of five young men from metropolitan Chicago arrested here earlier in the day on the complaint of a sixth Chicagoland youth that they had beaten and kidnaped him.

Richard Noltemeyer, 17, of 1442 Clinton av., Forest Park, Ill., told police the five kidnaped him from Cicero, Chicago suburb, Sunday night and drove him away in his automobile after beating him because he refused to drive them to California. Noltemeyer's front teeth were loose, his lips bruised, and his left eye discolored.

Chief of Detectives Paul Catelline said the others admitted Noltemeyer's charges. The three charged with violating the Dyer stolen car act are Robert L. Chenault, 16, of 5108 22d pl., Cicero; August Sirmer, 17, of 2105 S. Crawford av., Chicago, and Florian Lewdonowski, 20, of 1901 50th st., Cicero. The other two, held as material witnesses, are Leroy A. Fabien, 15, of 3739 Euclid av., Berwyn, and Robert N. Mastenbrook, 16, of 2141 S. Gunderson av., Berwyn.

Thomas Ivers, 53, of 4212 S. Union av., an ex-convict, was acquitted by a jury in Criminal court yesterday of the murder of Timothy Hyland, 28, of 517 W. 42d pl., also an ex-convict, who was shot to death July 7 in an alley near 47th st. and Emerald av. TIME, WEATHER, NEWS IN POCKET: INVENTOR'S IDEA

Coming soon: the radio watch! When it's available, you may be able to get the time, weather, and, perhaps, the headline news every 15 seconds. That's the nub of a service proposed by Albert R. Mathias, a radio engineer.

As head of Electronic Time, Inc., of New York he has asked the federal communications commission for a license to operate a transmitter which would provide this ingenious service—a variation of the time-weather reports now given in many cities by dial telephone.

As envisioned the listener would simply place a tiny battery powered receiver, perhaps the size of a cigaret package, to his ear, press a button, and the 15 second report would follow. The Lilliputian receiver is still in the development stage.

ARTIFICIAL LIMB MAKERS TO FACE U.S.COURT TODAY

Atty. A. Leslie Hodson, counsel for five Chicago manufacturers of artificial limbs, indicted Nov. 14 by a federal grand jury in Washington, D. C., on charges of violating the Sherman anti-trust act, said yesterday they will appear voluntarily before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker today for proceedings seeking their removal to Washington.

The defendants are Joseph Berodin, owner of the 20th Century Artificial Limbs company, 179 W. Washington st.; Joseph S. Branham, vice president of J. E. Hanger, Inc., 1112 S. Michigan av.; J. Blaine Korrady, secretary of the Association of Limb Manufacturers of America and also of J. F. Rowley, Inc., both of 521 Monroe st.; Martin J. Nowak, owner of the Lyons Artificial Limb company, 184 W. Washington st., and Lawrence G. Weis, owner of the Peerless Artificial Limb company, 160 N. Wells st.

Assistant United States Atty. George G. Kelly obtained warrants yesterday for the arrest of the manufacturers, but said he would not cause their arrest before their appearance today.

Report Waukegan Yank Missing Over Okinawa

Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Hoff, 1511 Hamilton court, Waukegan, were advised by the war department yesterday that their son, Sgt. Walter Hoff, 22, a wire chief with the 7th air force radar station, has been "missing over Okinawa" since Nov. 13. Sgt. Hoff was in the army and had been overseas since February, 1944. He was graduated from the Waukegan Township High school in 1940 and was cadet lieutenant colonel of the school R. O. T. C.

AMA DENOUNCES TRUMAN HEALTH INSURANCE PLAN

Calls It Step Toward Full Regimentation

The house of delegates of the American Medical association, meeting yesterday in the Palmer House, denounced President Truman's proposal for compulsory health insurance as "the first step in a plan for general socialization not only of the medical profession, but all professions, business, and labor."

The statement added that voluntary prepayment medical plans now in operation in many parts of the United States, and rapidly increasing in number, will achieve all the objects of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill "with far less expense to the people and under these plans, the people will receive the highest type of medical care without regimentation."

"The Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill," the statement said, "is founded on a false assumption that solution of the medical care problem for the American people is the panacea for all the troubles of the needy.

Expensive and Inferior

"Positive proof exists from experience in other countries that inferior medical service results from compulsory health insurance. A program such as outlined is enormously expensive. It will result in greatly increased taxes for the entire population of the United States."

The house of delegates approved, however, that portion of the President's proposal providing federal aid for the construction of hospitals and health centers.

The President's proposal for extension of maternal and child health service was referred back to the committee on legislation for further consideration.

"The Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill would make this effective by increased grants in aid thru the children's bureau to the individual states," the report of the legislative committee to the house of delegates said. "This constitutes an insidious attempt to turn over to the federal government functions that are definitely functions of the medical profession.

Urges Transfer of Bureau

"The delegates recommend again the removal of the children's bureau from the department of labor to the United States public health service in the federal security agency. The American Medical association has always favored aid for the extension of maternal and child health service where need can be shown."

The house of delegates also approved the Presidential proposal for the development of a national research foundation, to be headed by a committee.

The Presidential proposal for compensation for loss of earnings due to sickness, was sent back to the reference committee for further action.

Expect Sessions to End Today

The 175 delegates, representing more than 125,000 American physicians, expect to conclude their deliberations today, one day ahead of schedule. They approved an offer by the American Red Cross to turn over for use by the civilian population of all the plasma the Red Cross has accumulated from the war and navy departments. The plasma will be distributed under the auspices of state medical associations.

Also approved were resolutions recommending the immediate discharge of all medical officers not needed for military service and the appointment of a commission of seven members—four of whom are to be military officers—to plan the complete utilization of the nation's physicians in any future war or peacetime emergency.

PACKER'S WIFE SAYS PAROLEE IS HER ATTACKER

In a showup line with other prisoners, George Bristol, 27, a paroled Joliet convict, was pointed out yesterday by Mrs. Ruth Randall Mayer, 34, of 2247 Orrington av., Evanston, as the man who beat and robbed her in her home last Jan. 6. She is the wife of Carl G. Mayer, vice president of Oscar Mayer & Co., meat packers.

Bristol, arrested in New Orleans, La., on Nov. 24 from identification of his police photograph made by Mrs. Mayer, confessed the crime after his return to Evanston by Police Chief Carl Ekman Monday. He beat Mrs. Mayer severely and fled with $50 after entering the house on the pretext that he had been sent to repair the radio.

He was charged with assault with intent to murder and will be arraigned today in Evanston Municipal court.

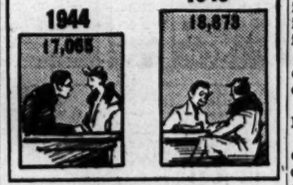
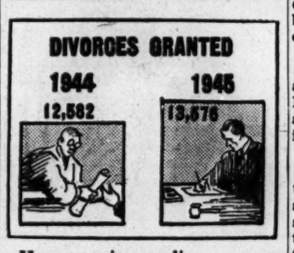
DIVORCES FILED



DIVORCES GRANTED



How marriages, divorce cases filed, and divorces granted have increased in Cook county in the last year.

Marriages, divorces granted, and divorces filed in Cook county all rose approximately 9 per cent during the fiscal year ended Nov. 30 over last year, county officials said yesterday. Increase in marriages was attributed by Michael J. Flynn, county clerk, to the growing number of war veterans who have returned to civilian life.

These same veterans' marriages also are responsible for the boost in divorces, according to Judge Edwin A. Robson of the Superior court, who said that too many of the unions are performed hastily and without due consideration of the responsibilities inherent in marriage.

The number of marriages, according to Flynn's figures, have risen from 39,089 in the fiscal year ending Nov. 30, 1944, to 42,392 in the 12 month period ending Nov. 30, 1945.

Figures released by Henry Sonnenschein, clerk of Superior court, and John Conroy, clerk of the Circuit court, showed divorces filed in the same periods were 17,065 in 1944; 18,873 in 1945. Divorces granted were 12,582 in 1944 and 13,576 in 1945.

MEDICAL GROUP HONORS 3 FOR SOCIAL WORK

Citizen fellowships were conferred on three members of the laity last night by the Institute of Medicine of Chicago at the organization's 30th annual meeting in the Palmer House.

The recipients were Mrs. Harry Hart, 200 E. Chestnut st., director of the Juvenile Protective association; Miss Mary E. Murphy, director of the Elizabeth McCormick fund, and Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of the Council of Social Agencies of Chicago. The fellowships were conferred in recognition of distinguished service in the field of social service and related activities.

Dr. William C. Danforth, president of the institute, spoke on "Beginnings of Asepis, the Story of a Tragic Life," dealing with the career of Dr. Ignaz Philipp Semmelweiss, Hungarian gynecologist. Drs. George H. Coleman and Vernon C. David were reëlected to the board of governors and Dr. Italo F. Volini was chosen to become a member of the same group.

Riley warned the OPA would take action against bakers who do not post the ceiling price lists.

INSTALMENT XXVII

TERROR

"Miss Marriott?" The inspector referred to his typed copy of the doctor's letter to Colin Ladbroke. "I shall want to speak to Miss Marriott, preferably before I pay a visit to her employers. It might, perhaps, be arranged privately in this house? Good. By the way, you did go down into the tunnel, I suppose?"

"I did," Bruce said significantly, "I had a good look at those tracks."

"Humph, yes. Those would have made me query the inmates of Turrets even if I'd heard nothing whatsoever about them; but there's no conclusive evidence. The elder Miss Bolles declares she herself narrowly escaped being shot? Miss Marriott dubs it a fabrication. That same evening, five minutes earlier, Miss Marriott had an authentic escape from a bullet in the front drive. Miss Trimble, known to be carrying a revolver, had just been there, delivering her note. These luminal tables—easily soluble in spirits, are they? And if Miss Bolles didn't dope her own brandy then she has had at least one escape from death. What's this about poisoning the dog?"

"I can't vouch for the poisoning, inspector. The corpse was still down in the tunnel. If the wind had blown in from the west——"

"Just so. Let's go back a bit, doctor. Right back to the grease on those stairs."

"One moment, inspector. Yes, Mrs. Young?"

The daily woman faltered at the door. "Pardon, sir, but did someone come along to these side windows? I heard a bicycle bell out back, and as I was doing the blackout I fancied——"

"These windows? We'll soon see."

The inspector raked the curtains aside and opening the central French window took a cautious step along the path. "No," he reported, in again. "False alarm."

Some one was in the tunnel—at the far end, where the blood had spread in and around the heaped stones. Avis felt her throat tighten to scream. She had just come from the spot, she had seen behind the rubbish-pile, it was the one corner where any one could hide.

The steps moved slurringly on.

Terror such as she had never known turned her knees into wet dough. She backed against the damp wall, sick with the awareness that there was no cover to shield her, no niche of escape. To flee down the tunnel meant she would only get cornered in the bricked-up end. She stiffened herself against the impulse, sticking desperately to the spot where dim twilight still entered from above, shutting her eyes, opening them again, counting the dull oncoming thuds.

A curdling scream rent the stale air.

It took a full moment to realize it was her own voice. Another swooning moment before she registered that the shuffling feet had ceased to plod. Up and down the black tunnel there was silence. Then—could it be the steps were hurrying the other way? Her ear caught a faint raking noise, and stillness closed in again. Slowly it penetrated she was safe, but still trapped. Who in Turrets would ever dream of hunting for her down here?

Just how the figment of an utter improbability entered her mind she could not have said, nor could she subsequently account for the hardihood that induced her to switch on her torch and force her fear-numbed feet back in the region of that last unclassifiable sound.

The light bulb dwindled to a pallid spark. She bumped into something hard. By all miracles the ladder! It was here.

Twice that evening Maud's eyes glued Avis with a pale fixety. It brought her into icy sweat. She remembered the pair of galoshes, in plain view, by the brink of the second vent-hole. Or the give-away had been her scream. For a few minutes, Avis argued, her own movement underground had been noiseless, and it was during her return from the upper end to the middle that the ladder had been quietly drawn up from one vent-hole and carried along to the one she had just passed. It was the shuffler's taking panic from her suddenly-realized presence that filled her with a different sort of fear.

Erica had locked both her outleading doors. Only the dry crackle of paper gave proof that she was still up; but later on, when from her own room Avis had heard Maud come up, knock curtly, and after a pause descend, the key to the bathroom door turned and in the frame of the opposite door Erica appeared.

"I-I'm leaving these two doors open," she mouthed. "But would you very much mind locking your door into the hall? You will, won't you?" she implored.

Once in the night Avis woke, muttering, "No,—no—keep off!" It took seconds to believe she was not back in the tunnel.

Just as the downstairs clock twanged two, her ear had caught the brief sibilance heard once before. A swift, just-audible wheesh—close at hand, here on this top floor. She unlocked the door, crept softly to the bannisters; but whatever the sound was it was finished.

The thing which struck Avis at breakfast was that Maud was no longer afraid. There was an iron resolution in her eye. When Avis at 10 was in the drawing room, Maud had already taken her seat in the study. Robin was with her and their remarks were clearly audible. The two, evidently continuing a discussion begun elsewhere, didn't worry about her at all.

"Don't," Robin urged, almost beseechingly. "That is——" he floundered, obviously embarrassed. "God knows I loathe the very smell of the blighter, but why stir things up, if he isn't doing any harm?"

"Moravian?" Maud snorted. "I was taken unaware. I've allowed him to stop more than a fortnight. Now the creature must go."

"Yes," Robin objected, "but supposing he declines?"

The woman at the desk choked with indignant spleen. "Declines! In that event, Erica must be told."

"But I say, old thing," the boy expostulated, "you can't seriously mean she's never known anything about that Egyptian mess-up? It's incredible! Why, Trimble must have put her wise the first moment the little bounder began sending out feelers from Bath."

"You're a simple boy, Robin. I've excellent reason for believing that Erica kept those oily letters strictly to herself. I can no longer run the risk of letting her fatuously bestow generosity on so ill-placed an object. You see she can still, unfortunately, sign checks. Kindly knock on his door and say that I wish a word with him now. I know what I am doing, but for Erica's upset I should never have dreamed of postponing. . . . Is that Miss Marriott out there? Miss Marriott, I shall require Mr. Moravian's ration-card. He will be leaving us today."

On the back-stair landing Avis passed Robin slouching off on his mission. She took the ration-card to the study.

Two Young Chicago Bachelors Figure in Engagement News

BY JUDITH CASS

FROM New York City and from Los Angeles, Cal., come engagement announcements involving two young Chicago bachelors, Charles Parkman Rockwood Jr. and Capt. Raymond C. Wieboldt Jr. The former, son of Mrs. Rockwood and the late Mr. Rockwood of Geneva, will marry Miss Lois Kellogg Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Adams of New York. The latter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wieboldt of Evanston, will take as his bride late in January Miss Jane Mary Eklund, daughter of Mrs. Emil J. Eklund and the late Mr. Eklund of Los Angeles, Cal.

Mr. Rockwood is in New York for a visit with his fiancee and her parents, and Miss Adams is expected here after the first of the year. A graduate of the Brearley school, she attended Cornell Agricultural college and has been doing Red Cross nurses' aid work. Mr. Rockwood attended the Brooks school in North Andover, Mass., and was graduated from Yale university in 1939. While teaching at Yale-in-China, following his graduation, he was stricken with infantile paralysis. He made the trip home from Hunan province, 1,000 miles inland from Shanghai, by litter, river launch, and plane, flying high over Japanese artillery fire en route to Hong Kong.

During the war Mr. Rockwood served as civilian navigator for the army transport command in the Pacific theater, and when he returned to this country two weeks ago he just had completed two years' service with the office of war information in India, Burma, and China. He has one sister, Miss Jane Rockwood.

Miss Eklund and her fiance met in the home of her uncle and aunt, the Holman D. Pettibones, with whom she spent a year here. Miss Eklund was graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles. Her fiance, who prepared for college at the North Shore Country Day school and at the Hill school, was attending the technological school at Northwestern university when he entered the service four years ago. He returned home last month after serving with the army engineers and now is on terminal leave following two years overseas. He has two sisters, Miss Nan and Miss Mary Lou Wieboldt, and a brother, James, and Miss Eklund has a brother, Holman.

Other Engagement News

A tea which Mrs. Percy B. D. Idler gave recently in Wilmette, ostensibly to welcome her daughter, Eleanor, home from nearly two years of service in India with the American Red Cross, turned out to be an engagement party. Miss Idler met her fiance, Lt. Russell P. Johnson of the army engineers, in India, while he was engaged on the engineering project of the famous pipe line in the China-Burma-India theater of operations.

Miss Idler, daughter of the late Dr. Idler, was graduated from Rockford college and received her master's degree at the University of Chicago. Her fiance, whose home is in New York Mills, Minn., is an alumnus of Marquette university and the University of Minnesota. The wedding is planned for February.

Here and There

Now at home in San Francisco, Cal., are Capt. and Mrs. Henry Dollard, who were married recently following the bride's divorce from Comdr. H. Foster Straw. The marriage is a second one also for Capt. Dollard, who formerly was stationed at Great Lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Byron Smith [Pauline Hart] are receiving congratulations on the birth of their fourth son, Christopher Byron, Nov. 27 in St. Luke's hospital. The baby's brothers, all of whom share his middle name, are Harold Jr., David, and Stephen.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Gifford Gardner [Peggy Bear] of Winnetka became the parents of their second son, John Westbrook, Nov. 16 in the Evanston hospital. Mr. Gardner recently was discharged from the navy, in which he served as a lieutenant.

Lt. and Mrs. Herbert R. Keith became the parents of a second daughter, Andrea, Nov. 12, in San Francisco, Cal., where Lt. Keith is stationed with the navy. The baby and her sister, Carol, are granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Vested of Chicago and of Mrs. Robert Keith of Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin K. Brown [Margaret Dodd] are being congratulated on the birth of a son, Wil-

Fingers Cold? Shops Are Full of Gay Mittens

BY REA SEEGER

If you don't know what to do with your nipped and chilly fingers, start trying on the mittens you'll find around the shops and stores. They're out in gay profusion for the gift shoppers, in a color range that is eye blinding. There are a few pastels but the brilliant hues virtually steal all the attention. The biggest and the brightest mittens are made of thick deep piled fleece. This stuff is at least three inches thick so you can imagine the finished effect. Vivid emerald green, red—the color of a fire wagon—golden yellow, and a carbon blue are a few of the shades. Some can be seen for blocks.

White, beige, blue, and a few pale pinks provide the pastel contrast. White rabbit skin mittens with palms of scarlet are lush models. Some of the rabbit skin models are dyed vivid colors, then have palm sections of white leather, others have backs of green-dyed rabbit with the leather sections dyed the same shade. Other fur mittens are made of rather fantastic colored fur. There's a golden russet tone, for instance, that easily could be the hide of some prize Persian kitty. Less catty fuzz, made into mittens, resembles the hide of the gopher or chipmunk. Plenty of small furry animals have given their all to protect frost bitten fingers of the girls this winter.

Fur lined mittens, and those with linings of 100 per cent wool fabric make ideal gifts for women who drive all winter long. Swanky hand stitched pigskins which are so cleverly made as to assure warmth plus enough room for freedom of the fingers are costly but well worth every penny. Last are the knitted yarn affairs, in which the most brilliant colors imaginable are used to fashion the designs. Ubiquitous sequins help bring these solid looking mittens up to festive standard.

Children Will Aid Drive to Have War Stamp Books Filled

Signal for a pre-Christmas treasure hunt is called today for Illinois school children by Mrs. Leo P. Cummings and Mrs. F. Russell Lyon, chairmen of the women's division schools committee of the county and state war finance committee. The search is for unfilled war stamp books. It is estimated that 5 millions remain outstanding, and the roundup of "war orphan" stamp books, to be completed and sent in for a conversion and investment in E bonds, is a move in the current Victory loan. Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, chairman of the women's division and vice chairman of the general committee, points out that there are advantages in converting stamps into bonds. Bonds bear interest, while stamps do not, and stamps are irreplaceable if lost. The treasure hunt will be started Monday in all schools, public, private, and parochial.

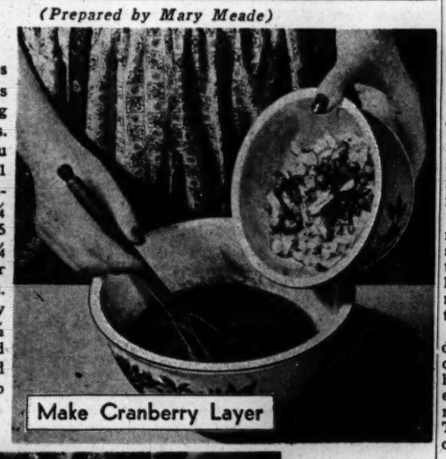
Cranberry Chicken Salad

(Prepared by Mary Meade)



Make Cranberry Layer

1. Cook 2 cups cranberries in 1 cup boiling water 10 minutes. Force thru strainer. Add 1 tablespoon gelatin softened in ¼ cup cold water 5 minutes and ¾ cup sugar. Stir until dissolved. When slightly thickened, add ½ cup each chopped celery and diced apple and ¼ cup chopped nuts.

Prepare Chicken Salad

2. Fill molds ¾ full, then chill. Add ¾ cup mayonnaise to 2 teaspoons gelatin softened in ¼ cup cold water and dissolved over boiling water. Mix with ¼ cup chopped green pepper, ¼ cup sliced stuffed olives, ½ cup finely cut celery, 2 cups cubed cold chicken, and ½ teaspoon salt.

Fill Molds and Chill

3. Place chicken salad over firmly chilled cranberry layer. Pack well to insure a well filled mold. If 6 small molds are used, there will be enough chicken mixture to fill the centers of the turned-out salads. For a buffet table, one large circular or oblong mold would be more suitable.

Serve on Crisp Lettuce

4. This colorful salad, appealing with its bright reds and greens, is perfect for the holiday season. It's hearty enough for the main course at a luncheon, supper or evening party. Accompanied by a hot bread, a beverage, and Christmas cookies or fruit cake, it makes an ideal party menu.

Rationing Stays as New Sugar Quota Is Fixed

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—The agriculture department announced today that it has allocated sufficient sugar for civilians for the first quarter of 1946 "to maintain rationing at present levels."

The department said in a statement, however, the world supply of sugar in 1946 is expected to be about the same as in 1945 and there is little likelihood that sugar will be removed from rationing "for some time to come."

The announcement came a few days after some congressional critics of the government's sugar program had urged an increase in the present ration of five pounds for four months per person for home use. This allowance is exclusive of special canning allotments.

The first quarter allocation is 1,100,000 tons compared with 982,000 tons for the current quarter. Officials said much of the increase of 118,000 tons is expected to go to institutional and industrial users, including food processors who have not been able to obtain their full quota because of limited supplies.

The department said that on the basis of allocations and distribution so far, civilian per capita consumption in 1945 will average about 72 pounds compared with 89 pounds in 1944 and an average of 96 pounds in the 1935-'39 pre-war period.

Looking to the future, the department said 1946 production may increase a little, but that stocks have been reduced to a minimum. It added:

"The only area where there is a sufficient amount of unallocated sugar stocks is Java, and because of the internal situation there it has not been possible to make further investigations regarding the availability of these supplies. So far, none has been shipped from the island."

The department said shipments of sugar to this country from the Caribbean area in the first quarter of 1946 are expected to be substantially lower than the usual rate for that time of the year. This results, it said, from the low state of year end stocks in that area. Because of the outlook for Caribbean supplies, the sugar situation on the east coast may be much tighter, early in 1946, than in the remainder of the country, the department said.

Percy Grainger's Recital Dilutes Brilliance and Lyricism With Streak of the Astringent

One of the more curious events of the season was Percy Grainger's Orchestra hall recital on the Musical Arts Piano series, which flatly refused to be classified in any convenient category. It often was rewarding in a kind of iconoclastic brilliance, and time and time again it stirred the flooding lyricism that makes Mr. Grainger unique in the Grieg Concerto, but thru it ran an astringent streak that invariably shied away from a climax. It was as if he deliberately snubbed the emotions of music with its mechanics in a performance that illustrated the little lectures with which he unaccountably prefaced the music—not precisely professional remarks, but the offhand statements of a man who suddenly decided he had something to say.

It seemed to me that of all the concert, the Bach Toccata and Fugue in D minor came off best under this treatment. Mr. Grainger played it with true brilliance, yet with a lightness that cut away the underbrush of concealing tone. It was fresh and clear and shining, a vivid, as he put it, secular preface to the church Bach of the Prelude and Fugue in C sharp minor.

But what came after did not meet that challenge. The four Chopin etudes had a wealth of beautiful playing, and the grave loveliness of the C sharp minor [opus 25] was richly realized. But the fiery C minor and the glowing B minor not only never quite rose to the climactic crest the ear demanded, but actually seemed to be detoured by that astringent desire for dryness. The same thing happened to the Polonaise in A flat, tho much of that performance had a freshness to blow out a lot of carelessly accumulated dust.

The Grieg Sonata, which Mr. Grainger said the composer wrote for piano rather than for orchestra so it could be heard in every home, emerged as an attractive work, but not one in which I could discover the lyric or epic qualities sometimes attributed to it. Mr. Grainger also played an admirable performance of Sibelius' Romance in D flat, a thin, almost attenuated but crisp performance of the Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, and an encore or two of his own, including a flossy version of Gershwin's "Love Walked In" that Gershwin would never have recognized.

Notes

The Metropolitan Opera company comes to the Civic Opera house the week of May 6. . . . Elisabeth Bergner probably will extend her Great Northern engagement in "The Two Mrs. Carrolls," and a tentative subsequent booking for that house is Kay Francis in "Windy Hill." . . . Alexander Kipnis is ill and his Orchestra Hall recital has been postponed until April 8. . . . K. T. Stevens will take one more week for complete recuperation, returning to "The Voice of the Turtle" Dec. 17. Meanwhile Louisa Horton has to be on her way to Boston rehearsal, so next week at the Selwyn, will find Nancy Holland, the understudy, getting her chance to play Sally at last. . . . "The Hasty Heart" announces its Blackstone intention of playing at a $2.50 top, with $2 matinees, plus tax, of course, and with a tilt on New Year's eve. . . . The Marshall Field & Co. Choral society will present its 19th annual Christmas concert of music from Handel's "The Messiah" this morning at 9:45 in the Walnut room on the seventh floor of the main store. Edgar Nelson conducts and soloists are Wilma Reynolds Abel, soprano, and Raymond McAfee, bass.

Inquiring Camera Girl

By Maryon Zylstra

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting quesion submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Mrs. Thelma T. Calibet, 6615 Kenwood av.]

THE QUESTION

WHERE ASKED

THE ANSWERS

Mrs. Minnie Kerwin, housewife, 7538 Clyde av.—It stands to reason that people wear more clothes in winter because it's cold. Then why should a girl put on a sweater, scarf, warm coat and mittens without covering her legs? I never allowed my daughter to go without stockings in the winter. I don't think it's good for any one.

Mrs. Catherine Bartal, housewife, 2006 139th st.—I think that even tho children can stand a lot of hardships, going without stockings is injurious to their health. It may not affect them now but it may show up in later years. They think it's smart to go without stockings. The colder it is the smarter they think they are.

Burnell Adams, chief of service, 7758 East End av.—It's a fad to wear anklets to high school and if the girls can take it and want to wear anklets I don't know why any one should object. They wear bobby sox all year around and their legs probably get used to the cold gradually. I'm in favor of it.

Mrs. Helen Finney, housewife, 5525 S. Oakley—When I went to high school I went bare legged. Naturally I think it's all right for other girls to do it. It never made me ill. I didn't like to wear long stockings because it was too much trouble to change for gym, and dressing took longer. Silk stockings were too expensive, too.

Bill Meyrick, 7758 Jeffery av.—On some of the cold days we have in Chicago I should think girls would be awfully cold without stockings. I know I'm cold in long wool pants. Somebody is not going to like me for this but I think if a girl has any sense she'll wear long stockings for appearance sake and for her health.

Mrs. Therese Capparelli, housewife, 2504 E. 77th st.—Maybe I'm being old fashioned but I think that going without stockings in the winter can't be good for any one. Some children are healthy and can take anything but the majority of them wouldn't have so many colds and sore throats if they'd wear stockings.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 4—Spencer Tracy is mighty sad over "The Rugged Path." New Yorkers predict Bob Sherwood won't write a good play for years. He's been dishing out propaganda too long. But when Spence returns here, he'll go into Sinclair Lewis' "Cass Timberlane"—a wonderful part. Truthfully it can be said that Metro does better by him than Broadway. . . . Mike Curtiz finally made up his mind. No, he won't accept an interest in the Willie Wyler-Frank Capra corporation. He's got his own independent unit all set up at Warners. As one of his friends said, "Mike knows his way to and from that studio, and he doesn't like changing his directions." . . . Humphrey Bogart and Jack Warner are at peace. Bogey finally convinced Warner that all he wants is a good story. He never fought for anything else, and the big boss promised to find one for him.

The Admiral and the Bogeyman

A very moving incident occurred at the Mocambo when Adm. Halsey was here. He was sitting at one table with a party, while Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, and Mark Hellinger were at another. Finally, at the end of the evening, Bogey went over like a school boy and said to Halsey, "Please, sir, may I shake you by the hand and just say, thank you." You'd never have known that was the tough guy of the screen. . . . Incidentally, our writers missed a great bet by not following Adm. Halsey around during his visit here. So many human things happened. But come to think of it, about the only guy who could have written a farewell to that proud uniform was our own Gene Fowler. . . . Van Heflin and Angela Lansbury have been added to the cast of "Till the Clouds Roll By." In it Angela sings that old Jerome Kern tune "How Do You Like to Spoon?" In fact, you'll hear 22 of Jerry's tunes in this film. Its release can't come too soon. That's one picture I'll see over and over and over again. . . . Mickey Rooney will be home with his wife and baby—whom he's never seen—for Christmas. . . . Van Johnson wanted to ride in the Santa Claus lane parade opening night, but this time Metro, and not the chamber of commerce, prevented him.

Star Light—Of Such in Hollywood

The Jules Steins' party for Mr. and Mrs. Simon Marks was a humdinger! It's no wonder that visitors do a rave about our Hollywood parties. I know of no other city where you could gather together so many beautiful women and handsome men. If the screen had done nothing else but collect so many beauties here, it would have filled a crying need. After all, when you get Lana Turner, Ros Russell, Joan Crawford, Mrs. Hank Fonda, Mrs. Gary Cooper, "Coop," Van Johnson, Jimmy Stewart, and people like that under one roof, you've got something. And let's not forget newcomers Celeste Holm and Rex Harrison. It was Jimmy McHugh and the delightful way he tickles the ivories that really brought the party to boil. Mrs. Henry Ginsberg couldn't keep her mind on the lyrics, and neither could the gentles present, while watching—not listening to—Celeste Holm sing.

A New Deal for Miss Brooke

Hillary Brooke gets her biggest role to date in the Hedy Lamarr picture, "The Strange Woman." Hillary plays the part of Meg Saladine. . . . Stories to the contrary, Fred MacMurray has not gone back to Paramount. He's still freelancing. . . . Alan Curtis is much improved after his automobile accident, but he's still in the Burbank hospital. . . . After the birth of her third and last baby by means of Caesarian, Mrs. Hank Fonda sent the Myron McCormicks her mink baby carriage robe. When Myron saw it, he said, "Good heavens! 'The state of the Union' will have to run forever if I'm supposed to 'mink' my little girl like that." . . . Producer Lester Cowan is off to New York to complete plans for his 1946 schedule. His first will be the late F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Babylon Revisited." Fitzgerald wrote the screen play shortly before his death.

Marie Finally Stepping Out

After four years' dancing at the Metropolitan, Marie Gambarelli will act in "Angelica" on the New York stage. Her part is similar to that of the ghost in "Blithe Spirit." . . . Freddie Lonsdale finally has finished his play, which will be produced in London this winter, and comes west to spend the holidays with the Cheever Cowdins. . . . When Groucho Marx complained about the cold on the "Adventure in Casablanca" set, Director Archie Mayo promised to turn the heat on. A few minutes later a chemical plant across the street caught fire and a series of violent explosions followed. Said Groucho, extending his palms to the roaring blaze, "It's nice, Archie, but don't you think you rather overdid it?" . . . Arthur Caesar says Hollywood's the one place where you can actively retire.

Household Forum

By Louise Bargelt

Mrs. Len A., Holland, Mich.—To all new housekeepers: Don't keep your jellies and jams stored in too hot a spot. They can act up, sweat under the paraffin, break the seal, ferment! Store them where it is cool and dry.

Mrs. Bill W., Holland, Mich.—My husband uses portland cement for a host of things around our home, but never keeps it stored in the sack it comes in. He stores it in metal containers, preferably small containers as it keeps longer this way than in a large container which must be opened frequently. He keeps a tight fitting lid on containers and keeps them stored in a dry place, indoors.

Mrs. T. S., Chicago—To save on cleaning I keep my electrical appliances well covered with washable, form fitting covers. Dust and dirt can't get to them with this treatment.

Jane S., Chicago—If you fear the liquid in a bottle may dry out too fast, try turning the bottle upside down. This position is good insurance against too quick drying out and works well with many liquids.

Mrs. Bill W., Peoria, Ill.—To give a piece of leather furniture a very light, quick cleaning, I put a little vinegar in luke warm water and rub lightly with a soft cloth. Then I dry quickly and thoroly.

Mrs. J. G. B., Davenport, Ia.—For an adjustable measuring stick to determine whether furniture will fit into certain spots, I use a telescoping curtain rod.

Now—Please—Your Idea!

Soprano and Tenor Combine Talents in Kimball Hall Recital

Esther Hardie-Wimsett, soprano, and Robert G. Macdonald, tenor, were partners in a brief recital in Kimball hall last night. Another Robert Macdonald, the familiar one, contributed the accompaniments and lent the evening its most professional accent.

Miss Hardie-Wimsett employs what could be a valuable voice with great earnestness. When she uses it gently, as in Strauss' "Wiegenlied," its quality is attractive and there is a certain sympathy to her singing. But when she forces it to more vigorous duty, as in Wolf's "Er ist's" and in the first act duet from "Tosca" which she sang with Mr. Macdonald, the more it is forced the more the tone spreads and the less likely it is to reach the appointed pitch.

Mr. Macdonald sang three sorrowful songs by Franz Ries with much more feeling than his voice could musically convey. At his topmost exertion Mr. Macdonald produces some good solid tones of true tenor caliber. Otherwise his voice inclines to a qualityless huskiness. A. G.

Strained Foods for Baby Save Mother's Time

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Naturally [being a mother] and at present having two closely-related-to-me babies in the house, I know how busy your baby can keep you! But suppose, instead of using all the immaculately prepared strained foods, you had to do all the work the baby food people now do! It would surprise you. It used to take many hours and much energy to market for and scrape, sort, wash, peel, stew, simmer, and strain the vegetables, fruits, and meats, and to prepare custards and other puddings which comprise a modern baby's diet.

I was just about to hold forth in today's column on the subject of diet at greater length, when I found the inclosed in my mail:

"By the time he is 8 months old your baby is doing many remarkable new things. He sits up squarely now, and creeps with venturesome zeal. He understands a great deal that you say, and tho his backtalk still is limited to ma-ma, da-da, it's a satisfaction to feel a glimmer of response.

"At this stage you probably look on the play pen as the greatest mother-saver yet devised; but don't keep him fenced in all the time. Baby needs to do a certain amount of creeping each day, under your watchful eye, for exercise. While he's creeping and crawling around this way it's wise to keep baby's knees covered. Overalls do best and permit the greatest freedom. A dress gets raggle-taggle, besides hampering baby's movements.

"The eating schedule now is on a three-meals-a-day basis, with mid-morning and midafternoon nourishment an established between-meal routine. The meals themselves do not differ much from the menus he's enjoying lately. Portions are larger, and new varieties of strained foods now can be introduced regularly to train baby to enjoy a wider range of flavors.

"But basically the program reads the same: Milk, orange or tomato juice, fish liver oil in some form, pre-cooked cereal food, and all of the glass-packed strained foods now available on the market. These run from soups to fruit and pudding desserts. Together they teach baby almost all the basic food flavors, the entire scale of food colors, and most of the natural food aromas. This wide variety offers your baby a veritable kindergarten training in good eating.

"The strained fruits, vegetables, soups, and desserts now comprise the largest and most interesting part of his menus. Their garden-new taste, captivating colors, and satiny textures appeal as much to baby's palate as they contribute to his bodily well-being. Zweiback and egg loom large in his daily living also. By this time his menu pattern has simmered down to three square meals a day, with portions being served him getting larger week by week."

Lace Tablecloth

This crocheted design of a modified Irish lace pattern is by far one of the most attractive motifs to do. It is not difficult to work, and a completed tablecloth worked in this medallion is handsome. The medallions are joined as the work progresses.

Thru the Looking Glass

Our enthusiasm for the day isn't a new perfume, but it's one of the classics of this country. It's American made and styled for the special chic of the American woman, with an outdoor kind of daintiness and so much well bred allure it makes some of the European efforts at oomph look a little baroque and even a bit corny.

The specialist who made this some years ago tried to capture some of the beauty, the sweep, the freshness of our own blue grass country. We'd say she succeeded admirably; she got all the feeling of sweet smelling lilt, plus a dash of provocative romance. Hers is a perfume that women love to wear; it makes them feel well groomed and a little glamorous, too. And it's one men like their women to wear because it's as ladylike as it's lovely.

You'll find this in a simple container, smartly banded in blue, and the price tag isn't astronomical. For the special dressiness that makes a gift exciting, it's anchored to an adorable little figure of a wonderfully silly blue horse with ribbons and gay flowers. This is the holiday package that will win friends and the women in your life on Christmas morning.

If you're lucky, you can surround this perfume with any number of delectable bath trimmings in the same bright fragrance. You can collect a whole ensemble of bath powder, soap, toilet water, and such—all of which either singly or in a collection make the kind of a gift women treasure. ELEANOR NANGLE

Many Groups Are Preparing to Play Santa

With the yuletide season at hand many groups are busy with plans for making the holidays as merry as possible for those whom St. Nick otherwise might by-pass.

Tomorrow students of Rosary college will launch their annual charity drive with a tea at the school in River Forest, proceeds from which will be used to provide food and clothing for needy families at Christmas time. A part of the contributions to the campaign will answer an appeal made by the National Catholic Welfare council for overseas war relief. Miss Harriette Strenning and Miss Gloria Rion are co-chairmen for the drive.

Students of the Faulkner school will take gaily wrapped gifts with them today to Fellowship house for distribution among the children of the settlement. A Christmas party has been planned for the Fellowship house youngsters preceding the gift distribution under direction of Miss Elizabeth Faulkner, head of the school. She also is a long time member of the settlement's board of managers.

Another event on today's calendar which will benefit the Fellowship center is the annual Christmas bazar of the Woman's club, to be held in the settlement house from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m. The Fellowship board of managers, under leadership of its chairman, Mrs. Charles S. Pratt, has decided to dispense with its usual monthly meeting today in order to visit the bazar. Mrs. Pratt is an alumna of the Faulkner school.

Plans for the annual Christmas party given by the Protestant Women's Service club for the 25 children supported by the club and their foster mothers will be completed at a luncheon meeting of the service group today in the Wedgwood room of Marshall Field & Co. The yuletide fete will be held Dec. 19 at the same location. At today's gathering, the women also will hear Mrs. Ward Vanderpool give a report on the club's recent bazar and benefit card party, held in the Congress hotel. The party realized almost $3,000 for care of the youngsters.

Members of the Silver Wings of America will have packages for distribution among veterans confined to the Gardiner General hospital when they gather for their annual Christmas party at 8 p. m. tomorrow in room 500 of the Fine Arts building. Mrs. Philip A. Nash, program chairman, has planned a "grab bag" for the gathering, which is open to guests.

Members of the Women's Bar Association of Illinois, gathering at 5:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Chicago Bar association's quarters for their Christmas party, will be laden with packages for crew members and officers of the U. S. S. Diomedes. The Diomedes, a navy auxiliary repair ship sponsored by the association at its launching last June, is stationed in the far east.

The broad question, "Is it good policy to make the opening lead of a singleton?" is one which the tyro never wearies of asking. It is very much like inquiring, "Is quinine a good drug?" It all depends on what ails you. There are certain specified conditions when the lead of a singleton is apt to prove advantageous. The ideal case includes three factors: [1] Quick control of the trump suit, such as the ace or the king guarded several times. This is to prevent the declarer from extracting trumps at once and running off with the hand. [2] Some surplus little trumps, that would otherwise have no particular value. [3] The reasonable expectancy of entering partner's hand to obtain the desired ruff.

Where, however, the defender holds at least four trumps, as a general rule ruffs should not be sought, and an effort should be made to force declarer's hand to trump by leading the longest and most solid suit.

Where the lead of a singleton is indicated, it should usually be made at the earliest opportunity. It is much easier for partner to diagnose it as a singleton if it is led at once than if it is shifted to.

Failure to lead a singleton at the earliest opportunity worked out in a strange manner in today's hand and permitted declarer to make a neat play to prevent a ruff. West opened the king of hearts and received the encouraging nine from his partner. He promptly shifted to the three of diamonds. This was a clearly marked singleton and it was evident that West intended to obtain the lead with the ace of trumps and put partner in with a heart to obtain the ruff for the setting trick.

Declarer, therefore, looked for a way to prevent East from getting the lead. The method was simplicity itself. Neat but not gaudy. He won the second trick with the jack of diamonds and led the king of clubs. He was quite sure that west held the ace. On the king of clubs he discarded his remaining heart and West was in, with no way of communicating with his partner.

Note that if the singleton had been led at the opening, there would have been no way for South to break communication between the defenders' hands.

[Mr. Goren will answer bridge questions sent to The Tribune if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is inclosed.]

OOH!—Domestic Crisis!

SUE WAS FURIOUS at Tom's coldness. But she was really to blame. As her doctor said, wives often risk married happiness by careless, "now-and-then" feminine hygiene methods. He advised using Lysol disinfectant for douching—always. Cleanses thoroughly. Deodorizes. A proved germ-killer—far more dependable than salt, soda, or other homemade solutions. Yet so gentle for douching, it won't harm sensitive vaginal tissues—just follow easy directions. More women use Lysol for feminine hygiene than any other method. Try it.

For Feminine Hygiene use Lysol Disinfectant —always

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE ACTS TO JOIN MAJORS

ART JOHNSON CHOSEN IOWA'S MOST VALUABLE

Sets Pace in Ground Gaining, Scoring

Honor Roll

PLAYERS selected by their teammates as candidates for the Chicago Tribune Silver Football, which will go to the most valuable player to his team in the Western conference during the 1945 season, include:
PURDUE—Norman Maloney, end.
MICHIGAN—Harold Watts, center.
ILLINOIS—Mac Wenskunas, center.
MINNESOTA—Bob Fitch, tackle.
INDIANA—Howard Brown, guard.
OHIO STATE—Ollie Cline, full back.
IOWA—Arthur Johnson, full back.

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 4 [Special]—Arthur Johnson, 24, full back and former navigator of a B-24 over Europe, has been selected by his teammates as the University of Iowa's most valuable football player of 1945. The Fort Dodge 200 pounder thus became eligible for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S Silver Football award, to be made to the Western conference player judged most valuable to his team.

Art Johnson

Johnson returned to football this year after four years in service. He was an Iowa squad member in 1940 and 1941, but failed to win a major letter.

Leads in Gopher Upset

Johnson was discharged from the army air forces in September and returned to the university. He was handicapped by an ankle injury in early games, but hit his stride later and finished as leading ground gainer with 290 yards in 65 trials for a 4.4 average.

Art also was Iowa's No. 1 scorer with 18 points. Two of his three touchdowns were made in the Minnesota game, which Iowa won, 20 to 19, for its only conference triumph of the season. He carried the ball for 97 yards against the Gophers.

Took Part in Ploesti Raid

Johnson also is a star wrestler, finishing second in the conference 175 pound class in 1941. In war service he participated in the first low level bombing of the Ploesti oil fields in Romania in 1943 and on raids on Rome and Germany. He was interned in Portugal for 35 days after his plane was forced down.

Hawks Play Tonight on Boston Ice

Boston, Mass., Dec. 4 [Special]—Coach Dit Clapper's Boston Bruins, skating on the longest undefeated streak of the National Hockey league season, meet the Chicago Black Hawks tomorrow night with second place at stake.

The Bruins, who have won four of their last five games and tied the other, are only half a game behind the Hawks and Detroit Red Wings, who are deadlocked for second, and with the return of Zero Brimsek to the nets and the recovery of the ailing Bobby Bauer, they face tomorrow night's engagement with plenty of confidence. Sunday night they again will meet the Hawks in Chicago.

Clapper has been getting fine results from the use of his young line of Armand Guidolin, Bill Shill, and Don Gallinger, but tomorrow they will hook up with the league's best point making trio, Max and Doug Bentley and Bill Mosienko. It was this threesome which led the Chicago six to a 5 to 4 victory for the Hawks in the season's opener against the Bruins.

Probable starting lineups:

Chicago		Boston
Karakas	G	Bibeault or Brimsek
Allen	D	Egan
Wares	D	Crawford
Mosienko	R. W.	Guidolin
M. Bentley	C	Shill
D. Bentley	L. W.	Gallinger

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NEW YORK, Dec. 4—Sure, and the Irish are riding high in Chicago's big league baseball set. . . . The White Sox president is Mrs. Grace Comiskey, the general manager, Leslie O'Connor, and the field manager, James J. Dykes. . . . On the north side General Manager James T. Gallagher gives the Cubs a touch of Erin, but that's going far enough, unless, just to make it unanimous, the National league champions' manager starts signing his name O'Grimm. . . . When Gus Dorais of the Detroit Lions came into the Cleveland Rams' dressing room in Briggs stadium to congratulate Adam Walsh, whose eleven had just clinched the western division professional football title, Bob Snyder, standing nearby, beat a hasty retreat. . . . "When two old Notre Dame fellows get together," he said in mock panic, "this is no place for any one from Ohio university." . . . Bob is one of Adam's assistants. . . . Player chores in football and basketball are called assignments, but in hockey assignments are called points, which is rather confusing, since the players also are credited with points for scoring and for making assists. . . . Lee Ramage, the California heavyweight who fought Joe Louis twice, has returned to San Diego State college as boxing coach after his discharge from the navy. . . . Del Webb, co-owner of the New York Yankees, heads a company which is manufacturing aluminum clothespins, which plans to turn out 50,000,000 yearly. . . . Marquette football players and coaches agree the two outstanding backs they faced this last season are Marion Motley of Great Lakes and Ed Cody of Purdue. . . . Washington Serini, an outstanding tackle this fall at the University of Kentucky, was with the Chicago Bears a few seasons ago.

Bob Fenimore, Oklahoma Aggies' All-America candidate, averaged 7.4 yards in 140 tries this year. . . . He completed 31 of 61 passes for 598 yards and his 24 punts averaged 39.1 yards. . . . The Aggies, who also call themselves the Cowpokes, have won 18 straight intercollegiate games, a streak which parallels that of the cadets from West Point. . . . Torchy Peden, out of service, plans to resume six-day bike racing. . . . He has won more bike races than any other competitor—37. . . . Joe Conn, no relation to Billy Conn and a wingman for the Vancouver team in the Pacific Coast Hockey league, fights so well in gym workouts he has boxing managers on his trail. . . . He's 18 years old, 5 feet 9 inches, and weighs 175. . . . The man who has headaches when riots break out in India is Brig. Gen. Robert [Bob] Neyland, C. O. of the base section, Calcutta. . . . He's the former football coach at Tennessee.

Conversation Piece

"Didn't I tell you it wouldn't last?"
Loudly thrilled Annie McPhee
To Mrs. McCann in a voice that ran
From triumph to out and out glee;
"She came home last night with the youngster
For a visit, so they say,
But just wait and see, if you're askin me,
The 'visit's' for more than a day.

"And her with her four or five bridesmaids
With her poor old father to give her away
With his tight shoes and put-on smile.
Well, maybe he gave her away that once,
And good riddance I'll bet he thought then,
But it looks to me like somebody
Has given her back again.

"He got WHICH? He made WHAT?
Well upon my soul
Why didn't you tell me, Bess?
An oak leaf is it, a D. S. M.?
A lootenant-commander, no less!
Well, didn't I always say when the time was ripe
She'd pick her a real fine man?
Well, good morning now, Mrs. McCann!"

WALTER WARD KEEPS ALL-STAR BOWLING LEAD

Veteran Gets 4,975 Pins in 24 Games

BY CHARLES BARTLETT
[SCORES ON NEXT PAGE]

The brilliant company of tenpin artists in the fifth annual All-Star Bowling tournament still is chasing Walter Ward, the man with the permanent cheroot jutting out of his visage, as they dash into today's semi-finals in the Auditorium service men's center under the sponsorship of Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors' Association of America.

Ward, the Cleveland veteran who moved into contention from the beginning of the big show with the most consistent demonstration in the tourney, came out of the first four day's preliminary rolling with a tidy 24 game aggregate of 4,975, giving him a 45 pin advantage over Chester Bukowski, the talented member of the E. and B. Beers of Detroit, recent winners of the world team championship.

Bukowski Likes 1,313

Bukowski put over one of the most unusual feats in the history of the tournament yesterday when he tumbled 1,313 pins to duplicate the same figure on his Monday assignment. In order to match his second round effort, Chet had to pitch a strike on his last ball for a 209.

Holding down third place as the regiment of 48 preliminary survivors proceeds into today's 12 game semi-final phase of the 36 game total pin task is the giant and formful Connie Schwoegler of Madison, Wis., who maintained his pace of the early rounds for a 24 game count of 4,867. Trailing Connie, winner of the 1942 title, by 13 sticks was the acrobatic Andy Varipapa of Hempstead, N. Y. Andy fired a 1,275 total on his fourth round last evening for the 4,851 which outdistanced Pvt. Therman Gibson, Bukowski's teammate, by two pins.

Nagy Collects 4,811

Heading all unseeded Chicagoans with the final squad still to roll was George Morrison, the south sider who once captured the A. B. C. all-events championship and now rolls with the Classic league's Prima Beers. George stayed high in the running with a 1,205 that included four 200-plus games and gave him a 24 game aggregate of 4,814.

Steve Nagy of Cleveland followed with 4,811, and George Vallos of Youngstown came thru with a 4,805. The veteran, Frank Benkovic of Milwaukee, was in ninth place with 4,798, and Sgt. Ed Easter, 60 year old soldier from Waukegan, kept going in the field of youngsters with a nice 4,795.

Today's program, closing out all total-pin competition for the nine day endurance test, will consist of two afternoon blocks and two more in the evening. Two 24 man squads will be involved, working their matinee sessions at 1 and 3:30 p. m. and their evening stints at 7 and 9:30 p. m.

Join Seeded Stars

The 11 leaders for the entire 36 game route will then join up with the five seeded finalists who have been conducting a private little tussle of their own, and will continue same thru today's semi-final examination for a special side purse of $1,000, with $350 going to the leader for the 36 games.

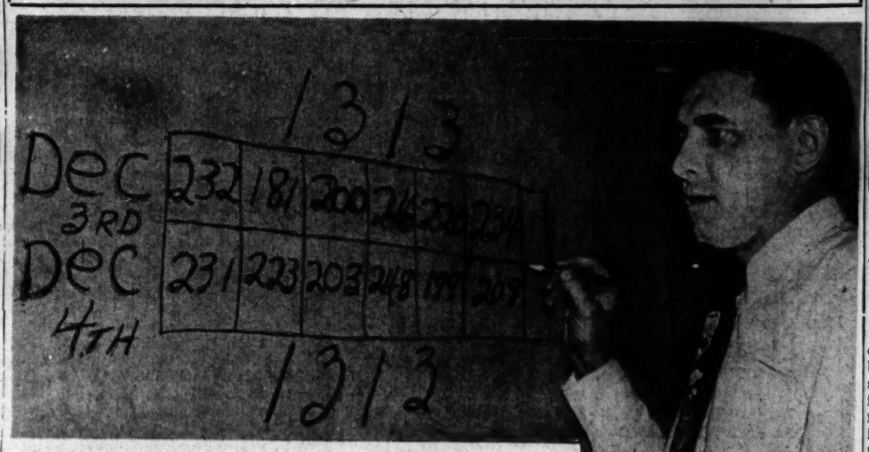
Heading the fivesome of seeded bowlers is Joe Wilman, the former army man who was runner-up for the 1944 crown. Joe has posted a 4,890 for the first 24 games, his nearest competitor being Buddy Bomar of Chicago, the defending champion, who enters today's stretch run with a total of 4,715. Next in line in the side battle are Joe Sinke of Chicago, 4,663; Ned Day of West Allis, Wis., former all-star champion, 4,658, and Paul Krumske, who held the title briefly last year, with 4,559.

It Runs Thru Sunday

The 16 finalists, five seeded and the 11 who have earned their place in the total pin marathon, will begin a four day argument tomorrow morning, continuing thru Sunday night's climax. Each will meet his 15 rivals in four game match blocks based on the last night of the program, with the top point scorer of the opening 15 matches meeting the second, the third the fourth, etc. The champion will be rewarded with first cash prize of $2,000.

Highlights of yesterday's rounds were a 289 submitted by 62 year old Bill Shaul, the Syracuse, N. Y., bowling instructor, and a 279 by Chicago's Verne Anderson.

BOWLING LIGHTNING STRIKES TWICE



Chester Bukowski of Detroit, one of the leading contenders in the All-Star bowling tournament on the Auditorium alleys, checks his 6 game total for last night and finds it is 1,313, the same as his figure for Monday's competition.

William Shaul of Minneapolis, Minn., enjoys well earned nourishment after blasting out a 289 to tie the tournament high score.

CHICAGO DODGES BOWLERS' STRIKE

It's Different Story in Peoria and Detroit

Operators of Chicago bowling plants last night contemplated no increase in prices in organized league play unless higher pay demands from pin boys force them to do so around Jan. 1.

Bowling officials attending the All-Star tournament in the Auditorium Service Men's center declared the price of 28 cents a line in league competition will remain, altho fees for open bowling may be raised to 30 cents shortly after the first of the year.

Definite action will be taken by the bowling alley proprietors following a meeting soon with officials of the pin boys' union. Chicago pin boys and those in most cities now receive 8 cents a line, 1¼ cents less than paid in Detroit.

Jerry Peck, manager of the Chicago Arena alleys; Eddie Linsz, secretary of the Bowling Proprietors' Association of America, and Louis P. Petersen, chairman of the pin boy committee of the Chicago Bowling Proprietors' association, were among the operators who saw no immediate possibility of a strike by Chicago leagues, such as have occurred in Peoria and Detroit.

[Reports from Peoria yesterday said that virtually every league in the city has abandoned its schedule in protest to the 30 cents a line charge. The larger establishments are mainly affected. A threatened strike of 65,000 league bowlers in Detroit materialized only to the extent of two leagues suspending.]

The lifting of OPA ceiling prices on Dec. 1 brought league strikes in Peoria and Detroit. However, it was pointed out that Cleveland owners, forced to lower their charge per game to 28 cents by OPA ceilings, recently returned to their old 30 cent rate and encountered no opposition from league bowlers.

Racing Up in Arms Against Bad Element

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Presidents and representatives of 33 of the nation's race tracks, alarmed at the bad press horse racing has been receiving lately, today gave the board of directors of the Thorobred Racing association a mandate to drive the bad element out of racing.

The directors received authority to "set up machinery to get at the bottom of any efforts that may be made to prejudice the name of racing," in the words of Alex Robb, executive secretary of the T. R. A.

Part of Crime Wave

"What today's action amounts to," he said, "is that the racing people are taking cognizance of the fact that we might be suffering our own crime wave, just as the rest of the country is. Racing is going to clean up."

Robb said the outspoken alarm of the race track tycoons was not the outgrowth of the two alleged doping cases recently uncovered at Jamaica and Pimlico.

Sort of Racing FBI

Previously, Robb pointed out, the individual tracks have been entirely responsible for policing their own bailiwicks. Today's action, which he characterized as one of the happiest events in the history of horse racing, sets up a sort of racing FBI with authority to ferret out evildoers on a national scale.

Twelve directors elected at the meeting were Henry H. Parr, Pimlico; Carlton F. Burke, Santa Anita; James E. Dooley, Narragansett; John C. Clark, Hialeah; Matt J. Winn, Churchill Downs; Benjamin F. Lindheimer, Arlington and Washington Park; Louie A. Beard, Keeneland; Eugene Mori, Garden State Park; George D. Widener, Belmont; Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Pimlico, Jack MacKenzie, Hollywood Park, and Donald P. Ross, Delaware Park.

SEEKS RATING FROM BASEBALL FOR '46 SEASON

Approval Needed by Three Sources

Columbus, O., Dec. 4 (AP)—The Pacific Coast league threw a blockbuster into a dull pre-convention session of the minor league meetings today by voting to become a full major league, even to "getting into the world series" some time in the future. The Coast league approved the jump unanimously, starting with the 1946 season.

The proposal—first attempt in three decades to break into the American and National leagues' exclusive set—now goes before the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues' convention [the minors], starting tomorrow. If approved, it will be laid in the laps of the major leagues at their meetings in Chicago next week.

The coast contingent of some two dozen delegates had been talking up the plan for 48 hours among the hundreds of baseball men here for the meetings and expects to get the blessing of their minor league associates at the national association meeting.

Expect Fight from Majors

However, the chances are the American and National leagues will take a hostile view of the attempt to cut into what has been their exclusive territory—so exclusive, in fact, that the major league agreement governing big league baseball mentions only the American and National leagues by name. Thus, if the Pacific Coast league's promotion should be approved, it would require rewriting the agreement.

"We hope it will go thru," Clarence [Pants] Rowland, president of the coast league, said after the meeting. "We hope the other major leagues will coöperate and make us a participant in the world series when such things can be worked out.

"We're not trying to fool the people. We're not a peak major league now, but we hope—and we're going to try—to attain that level soon if our advance is approved."

BID BY FEDERAL LEAGUE

The Pacific Coast league's bid for major league stature is the first challenge to the National and American circuits since the Federal league's ill-fated two year career in 1914 and 1915.

The Federal league tried to succeed by aggression, but the Pacific Coast will use persuasion in its fight to gain recognition as a third major. The Federal league, which raided organized baseball for talent, found itself opposed by the two majors and all the minor leagues.

Early in 1914 the Federal league was organized in Chicago with James Gilmore as president. Charles Weeghman and William Walker, who later were stockholders in the Chicago Cubs, were principal owners of the Chi Feds, which won the pennant in 1915. Indianapolis was the winner in 1914.

A Windfall for Players

President Gilmore had interested moneyed men in Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Kansas City, Buffalo, St. Louis, and Indianapolis in the project. Chicago was the eighth city. Newark supplanted Indianapolis the following year.

It was a harvest for the ball players while it lasted. Many who had been receiving salaries in the $4,000 bracket procured contracts, either with their own club or in the Federal league, for twice that amount. Injunction suits were common and attorneys' fees were tremendous. Construction of new ball parks cost fortunes.

A Tribune story of 25 years ago estimated that the cost of this baseball war to both sides was between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

DYKES SPURNS BID FOR HAYNES

Cubs Want a Southpaw from Cardinals

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Columbus, O., Dec. 4—James J. Dykes, doughty manager of the White Sox, arrived here in a burst of splendor today to attend the 44th annual minor league convention and pushed off with a negative announcement. He said that his first act was to turn down the Washington club's offer to acquire Pitcher Joe Haynes in exchange for the veteran Venezuelan, Alex Carrasquel. The Sox probably will get Carrasquel anyhow, it was said.

"I don't blame Clark Griffith for wanting to get his son-in-law back on the Senators," said Dykes. "Until Joe broke his leg last year he showed promise of becoming one of the best pitchers in the American league and toward the end of the season revealed he had fully recovered from the fracture. I feel, however, that I did my share in the father and son-in-law league last year when I provided Steve O'Neil with his world series shortstop, by letting him have his son-in-law, Skeeter Webb."

Sox Pick Chief Scout

The Sox announced the appointment of the veteran Patsy O'Rourke as chief scout. His selection is in line with the Chicago team's plans for expanding its shrunken farm system. Shreveport, La., and Waterloo, Ia., are the only known chain teams, but arrangements have been made with a third club in a high minor. This new connection will be disclosed later in the convention.

The Sox also announced the return from war service of Pitcher Edgar [Lefty] Smith and Infielder Dario Lodigiani.

The large assembly of Cub officials was rounded out tonight with the arrival of Vice President Jim Gallagher, Manager Charley Grimm, and Traveling Secretary Bob Lewis from Chicago.

Sam Breadon, owner-president of the St. Louis Cardinals, already conceded the National league 1946 pennant by 20 or 40 games, arrived this morning and found almost everybody, majors and minors alike, most solicitous about his health and comfort. The reason for this great burst of friendliness is skilful Sam's possession of the deeds to a great over-abundance of star talent.

Braves Want Lefties, Too

It was said Gallagher and Grimm plan to bid for one of the Cardinals' galaxy of left handed pitchers. The Cubs and Braves, who were to have put on a bidding duel for Shortstop Marty Marion, have been discouraged in that luxurious enterprise. But both are going after lefty deals. The Cubs, on records of previous seasons, could afford to pay fortunes for Max Lanier and Harry Brecheen, even if they transferred those worthy Cub-whippers to lucrative employment in one of Mr. Wrigley's gum works. Ernie White and Howie Pollett are other stellar Card lefties who would bring a pretty penny.

Oil Bowl Bid Declined by Southern Methodist

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 4 (AP)—Southern Methodist university today declined an invitation to appear in the Oil bowl football game at Houston Jan. 1 with the statement that it does "not feel proper to support a game competing with that of the conference's championship team." The Southwest conference champion is host team in the Cotton bowl at Dallas. This year it is the University of Texas. Southern Methodist finished second in the conference race.

Giannopolus, Peregud, Trotier Pace Scorers

A basket in the final minute by Marco Giannopolus, Hyde Park senior forward, gave the south side school a 39 to 37 victory over the Harvard School for Boys in a practice basketball game yesterday in the Hyde Park gym. Giannopolus collected eight field goals and four free throws.

Nick Peregud scored eight baskets for Kelvyn Park's seniors in a 49 to 47 triumph over Sullivan, while Steve Trotier tallied 15 points as Waller defeated Francis Parker, 44 to 41. Lineups:

K. G. SMITH, 53, FORMER DENTAL FIRM HEAD, DIES

Pneumonia Is Fatal to Winnetka Heir

Kenneth Gladstone Smith, 53, of 11 Indian Hill rd., Winnetka, retired president of the Pepsodent company, died of pneumonia yesterday in Evanston hospital.

He was the son of Douglas Smith, founder of the Pepsodent company, who died in 1927 leaving an estate estimated at 2 million dollars. A year prior to his death the elder Smith had given 1 million dollars to the University of Chicago.

Retired a Year Ago

Smith carried on the business founded by his father until a year ago last August, when he disposed of his interests. In 1916 he had married Miss Cora Clements, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Clements of Winnetka. The couple was socially prominent, maintaining a winter home in Palm Beach, Fla., where they entertained extensively.

The Smiths frequently entertained also aboard his yacht Kenkora II., built in 1930 at a cost of $150,000, which he subsequently sold to the government for use as a patrol craft in 1941.

In 1932, the yacht was seized in Chicago harbor by customs authorities after discovery of $2,500 worth of liquor aboard. Smith told the authorities the liquor was for the use of guests aboard the yacht. Later the same year he paid a $10,000 fine for technical violation of customs regulations, but at the same time, received a $59,895 income tax refund.

Charities Are Disclosed

The previous year, Smith had been disclosed by the Rev. Dr. Johnston Myers of the Immanuel Baptist church, as the financer of a bread line in the 900 block in N. Wells st., at an estimated cost of $1,500 a month.

In 1934, Smith was reported to have engaged an armed bodyguard of Chicago policemen to protect himself and members of his family from kidnapers at their Florida winter home.

He is survived by his widow and by two sisters, Mrs. Edwin Slater and Mrs. Edward Ellis. The time of the services were not set last night.

FINAL STAGES NEAR IN DOUGLAS AIRPORT PLANS

Mayor Kelly yesterday announced that plans for the new Douglas airport, northwest of the city, will reach final stages late this week when Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt returns from Washington, D. C., and brings details of the army's requirements at the field.

Hewitt expects to be in Washington several days. The mayor said he had sent the commissioner in response to a request from Gen. Arnold of the army air forces. Ralph H. Burke, chief engineer for the park district, and John Nash, former assistant to the mayor, accompanied Hewitt.

Mayor Kelly, in discussing his October request of the city council finance committee that 200 temporary policemen be appointed, declared ward committeemen will have no influence in the appointments.

HYDE PARK HOME OF ROOSEVELTS IS DEEDED TO U. S.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 4 (AP)—A quit claim deed, formally completing the transfer of the late President Roosevelt's Hyde Park estate to the government, has been filed in the Dutchess county clerk's office.

Thru the document, the Roosevelt family renounces all rights to the 33 acre tract except the right of burial for Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt "in that portion of the estate set aside as a cemetery to retain the remains of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

The late President deeded the property to the government as a national historical site. It includes the mansion overlooking the Hudson and the garden in which Mr. Roosevelt was buried.

Signed by Mrs. Roosevelt and her five children, the deed was accepted Nov. 21 by Interior Secretary Ickes.

RITES ARE HELD FOR FIVE CHILD VICTIMS OF FIRE

The five children of Pvt. and Mrs. Fred L. Ertmann Jr. of Fox River Grove were buried yesterday after simple services in the Salem Evangelical church, Barrington. Lynn F., 6, Janet, 5, Richard, 4, Judith Ann, 2, and Sharon, 1, lost their lives when fire destroyed their home Friday night. The Rev. Dore N. Ester, who conducted the services, described the children's deaths as casualties of the war since their father was in camp and their mother, Hildur, altho ill, was left alone to care for them. More than $2,000 has been raised by individuals and organizations to help the Ertmanns build a new home. Ertmann is to be released from the army this week at Camp Crowder, Mo.

CITY ALDERMEN VISIT HUGE N.Y. HOUSING UNIT

Sure Private Capital Could Act Here

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Dec. 4—Five Chicago aldermen, members of a city council subcommittee on housing, were unanimous today in their opinion that private capital can produce needed housing in large cities. They came to the conclusion after they made a two hour tour of Parkchester, a 50 million dollar 130 acre housing development in the East Bronx, a half hour elevated and subway ride from downtown New York.

The aldermen were shown thru the development by Frank C. Lowe, resident manager for the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, who built the parklike project as a sound, permanent investment of company funds and at the same time to provide modern accommodations for middle income families.

"This trip to Parkchester proves beyond all doubt that private capital can do this job of housing," Ald. Moss (5th), chairman of the committee, said. "Our problem now is to get some one interested in similar projects in Chicago."

Making the trip with Moss are Aldermen Pacini [10th], Bieszczat [26th], Harvey [2d], and Hilburn [47th].

Inspect Other Sites

Before visiting the project the aldermen were shown the sites of two other insurance company developments proposed for Manhattan, plus sites for two projects to be financed by federal and city funds. These four lie in a mile long section north of the Williamsburg bridge, along the banks of the East river and will require the demolition of several industrial buildings and many old slum type tenement buildings which for the most part have been abandoned.

They will cover a total of 114 acres, will accommodate 14,990 families and will rent from $5 to $20 a room. The buildings will be from 6 to 15 stories high.

In touring the Parkchester development the aldermen were told that 12,272 families occupy the projects' 58 buildings. More than 8,000 of the 35,000 occupants are children who have been provided with play space and parks for recreation.

Garages for 3,300 Cars

The buildings, 6 to 12 stories high, are fireproof and have self service elevators. There are five garages to accommodate 3,300 cars, plus stores, including branches of several famous New York shops, restaurants, bowling alleys, and doctor's offices.

Rents range from $32 for two rooms to $71 for five rooms and this includes gas, electric service, and refrigeration.

WARNS BUDGET MUST BE CUT TO BOOST CITY PAY

The city council finance committee must cut at least 2 million dollars out of its 1946 estimated corporate fund budget of $65,787,913 if it is to make any kind of an approach toward wage increase demands which have been made by city employes.

That warning was given the committee at its first budget meeting yesterday by Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th] chairman of a subcommittee on wage scales. Ald. James B. Bowler [25th] finance committee chairman said wage increases will not be discussed until the money is found.

The aldermen questioned and said they would discuss further requested appropriations of $71,000 for defense activities including the care of "protective equipment" lent the city by the government under the direction of the office of civilian defense.

BAD DREAM ENDS WITH PROBATION FOR MILLWRIGHT

Unaware of how he got there, Harold Nealy, 42, of 9726 Prairie av., a millwright, was asleep Sunday afternoon in the office of Dr. S. M. Lillienfeld at 716 W. 63d st. He was alone. Near him were two empty wine bottles and an alarm clock.

At 3:45 p. m. the alarm rang. Nealy grabbed the clock and a bottle and fled right thru the glass panel in the door. He was running down 63d st. with the ringing clock and an empty bottle clutched in his hands when police seized him.

The story was told yesterday when Nealy was arraigned before Judge Charles S. Dougherty in Felony court on a charge of burglary. The judge reduced the charge to petty larceny and put Nealy on probation for six months. "It was all a dream," Nealy said.

JUDGES REFUSE 148 NEW COUNTY JOBS, GRANT 27

Cook county's 1946 budget, which contains 1½ millions of election expense, an item that was not in the 1945 appropriations, is expected to approximate 25 million dollars, an all time record.

The judges of the Circuit court announced yesterday that the number of regular employes to work in the 13 fee offices would be 1,900, fewer by 148 than department heads had requested and only 27 above the number employed in 1945. The judges, under the law, fix the number of employes in these 13 offices.

Of the increase, 10 will go to the Juvenile court, which had asked 47, and 9 to the sheriff. The sheriff's plea for 18 more highway police was denied. On the temporary list the court approved an additional six workers for the recorder of deeds.

AFTER 3 YEARS, GRINDING ON BIG LENS RESUMES

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 4 (AP)—Scientists, turning from war to peace, yesterday afternoon removed a canvas that has covered the 200 inch telescope mirror since 1942 and resumed grinding away the few thousandths of an inch necessary to complete the world's largest astronomical reflector.

"We hope that within 18 months the mirror will have been installed in the now virtually completed observatory on Palomar mountain in San Diego county," announced Dr. John A. Anderson, California Institute of Technology scientist.

BRITISH EMPIRE GIVES U.S. RADIO CIRCUIT RIGHTS

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

BERMUDA, Dec. 4 — Representatives of the United States and governments of the British commonwealth today signed an executive agreement cutting international communication rates, abandoning communications monopolies in other countries, and giving the United States the right to maintain direct radio circuits with several commonwealth points.

At the close of the 12 day conference all eight participating governments accepted the principle that economic profit should be secondary to the increasing flow of information between the United States and the commonwealth. The United States, United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, and southern Rhodesia agreed to a five point program.

Retains Major Circuits

The United States, which established direct radio circuits with various parts of the commonwealth for purposes of war, will retain circuits to the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, and India. All circuits with the United Kingdom "shall be retained subject to examination as to the number required and to consultation between the two governments before any is discontinued." Instead of two direct circuits to Australia, New Zealand, and India, as under the war time agreement, the United States will have one to each and one each to Jamaica, Palestine, and Bermuda.

The pact said that no later than April 1, 1946, a ceiling rate of 30 cents a word should be applied on all full rate messages between the nations of the British commonwealth and the empire and any point in the United States. Ceilings were set at 20 cents for code, 15 for deferred and 10 for nightletters.

Agree on Press Rates

A ceiling of 6.5 cents a word was agreed to for press messages. The British offered to let the United States or any other country in on their empire press rate of a sterling penny per word (1.67 cents) but, altho the United States officials supported 3 cents a word as the "ultimate objective," they agreed with commercial companies that the empire penny rate was an uneconomic rate, subsidized by profits out of the more expensive commercial traffic.

The United States, United Kingdom, and Canada agreed to let press agencies establish their own private receiving stations in these countries.

The agreement included a clause stating that governments here would "neither support nor approve" efforts by their telecommunications companies to establish communications monopolies in third countries. British companies have such exclusive agreements in Saudi Arabia and Greece and one United States company has at least one such agreement in a central American country.

OPA TOLD PRICE POLICIES HOLD UP FURNITURE

Absorption of Rise Fought by Stores

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—Members of the National Retail Furniture association, Chicago, told office of price administration pricing executives at a conference today that the OPA's price absorption policy is keeping new furniture off the market, causing unemployment, and threatening the existence of small retailers.

Roscoe R. Rau

The conference, attended by 50 dealers from all parts of the country, was arranged in an attempt to obtain modification of the absorption policy, which will require retailers to absorb price increases of 2 to 20 per cent granted furniture manufacturers. The OPA has contended that retailers must absorb these increases, rather than pass them on to consumers, to prevent a rise in living costs.

Term OPA Survey Inaccurate

Roscoe R. Rau, executive vice president of the furniture association, and W. E. S. Griswold, president of the W. & J. Sloane company, New York, criticized the survey of 400 retail stores the OPA made last last week in connection with price absorption as inaccurate and incomplete. They said differences in business volume, geography, and type of store were not taken into consideration.

The retail representatives asserted that no store could operate at the extremely low overhead figures indicated in the OPA survey. In addition, the survey omitted many smaller cities containing a large portion of the retail furniture business.

Griswold said retail operating costs are increasing rapidly. For the last quarter of 1945, costs already are 10 per cent higher than the corresponding period last year, he said.

Says Many Stores Will Close

The association cited its own survey of 1,351 stores which concluded, "The retail furniture industry does not have the capacity to absorb additional cost increases without disastrous results."

The association members agreed that if the OPA does not ease its cost absorption policy, many retailers will be forced out of business, returning service men will be unable to find employment in the retail field, and consumers will be unable to obtain needed home furnishings. They said they hoped the OPA would permit retailers to pass on part of the manufacturing price increases to the public.

The OPA promised a "prompt decision" on their request.

RYE AND OATS TUMBLE; ONLY CORN IS FIRM

Some rye futures declined the permissible maximum of 5 cents a bushel for the second consecutive session in leading markets yesterday. May rye closed on the Chicago Board of Trade at the $1.65¼ low, down 21⅞ cents from the peak late in November. Liquidation and stop loss selling met with lack of support. New crop month futures closed 2⅛ to 2¾ cents lower, July selling below the ceiling on the 1946 crop the first time in about a month.

Weakness in rye led to general selling of oats which closed at their lows with losses of 1⅝ to 2⅜. Part of the pressure was attributed to holders of rye futures who sold oats as a hedge when unable to liquidate their rye lines.

Wheat was unchanged to 1⅜ off, new crop months leading. Barley was unchanged to 1 cent lower. Corn held unchanged at ceiling prices.

Report North American Seeks Loan to Retire Stock

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—North American company is understood to be negotiating for a bank loan to obtain funds with which to retire its 696,380 shares of 5¾ per cent preferred stock, it was said today. It would be redeemable at $55 a share, or at a cost of $38,300,900, to retire the issue, exclusive of accrued dividends.

Urge Revised Parity Plan to Aid Dairymen

Modernization of the farm parity program and the elimination of subsidies which are "making government wards of American farmers" were advocated yesterday at sessions of the National Coöperative Milk Producers federation convention in the Morrison hotel.

Rep. Flannagan [D., Va.], chairman of the house committee on agriculture, charged that subsidies and price rollbacks on farm products are undermining the basic principle of free government.

"This thing of the government stepping in and subsidizing one class in order for another class to get lower cost food, thus subsidizing both classes, is a fallacious policy," he asserted. "If not checked, it will undermine both classes and eventually our economic system.

Says Initiative Is Destroyed

"When we resort to subsidies we destroy initiative, we destroy incentive, we destroy competition, the things upon which free competitive American enterprise is built.

"If there is a class in America that is unable to purchase the necessities of life, the solution to the problem is to improve their economic status so they will have sufficient purchasing power."

Modernization of the parity price formula and a permanent self-help plan to meet the inevitable problem of periodic surplus disposal are imperative to prevent a drastic decline in dairy farm income, said Charles W. Holman, federation secretary.

Predicts Drop in Income

The congressional guarantee of 90 per cent of parity is the "only slight protection" to tide dairy farmers over two post-war years, he said, and predicted that the guarantee under the present parity formula would result in a drop of 33 to 36 per cent in total dairy farm income.

He suggested the creation of a gigantic surplus holding pool, administered by a bipartisan Presidentially appointed board. This corporation would purchase at a modernized parity price level designated offered products for resale to private or coöperative handlers or for utilization in noncompetitive domestic channels at lower prices.

Sen. Thomas [D., Okla.] attacked the present parity law as "delinquent and deficient," and asserted farmers will remain in a substrata section of America's economic life unless the law is amended to include all farm labor costs. Thomas is chairman of the senate committee on agriculture and forestry.

"A farm is a factory—producing corn, wheat, cotton, and other farm commodities," he said. "No other form of factory could exist for long if it failed to add the cost of factory labor to the cost of its product."

MOP PREFERRED SOLD TO ALLEN BY ALLEGHENY

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Allen & Co., brokerage and investment firm, has purchased at an unspecified price Alleghany corporation's holdings of 44,100 shares of Missouri Pacific railroad preferred stock, it was disclosed today. Alleghany also also owns 522,900 shares of Missouri Pacific common. The purchase was said to be for investment.

BORAX DEPOSIT SEIZURE VIEWED AS PRECEDENT

Anti-Trust Actions Used as Lever

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4—Startling use of anti-trust procedure to enable the government to seize land valued at 10 million dollars from a corporation was disclosed today. The case was studied with absorbing interest by lawyers as offering a possible precedent under which the government may seize any corporation property on the theory that such seizure tended to discourage monopolies.

Ten acres of California land valued at 1 million dollars an acre are involved. Its high value results from the presence of the purest known deposit of kernite, a mineral from which borax is produced. This deposit, in Kern county, and another near-by are the only known deposits of borate ore in the world.

In 1926 the deposit was discovered by United States Borax company, which two years later applied for a land patent for the site known as Little Placer. Burnham Chemical company sought a sodium permit for the same land.

Requirement for Validity

Under the terms of the mineral leasing act the borax company's claim could be held valid if it was found that the sodium deposits were not "dissolved in and soluble in water, and accumulated by concentration."

The department of interior upheld the claim on March 5, 1933, the day after Secretary of the Interior Ickes took office. On July 22, 1935, Ickes changed his mind and decided the case should be reopened with the result the Little Placer claim of the borax company was held invalid April 28, 1944, and a motion for a rehearing was denied July 31 of the same year.

On Sept. 1, 1944, the borax company sought an injunction in federal District court in Washington restraining cancellation of the mineral entry and requiring the issuance of a land patent to the company.

Two weeks later the department of justice instituted criminal and civil anti-trust actions against the borax company alleging it monopolized world trade in borax and borax products. Ickes asked the department of justice to include in any proposed decree in the civil anti-trust suit provisions for the dismissal by the borax company of its Little Placer action and the suit claiming the 10 acres.

Releases Claim on Property

The department of justice successfully promoted the Ickes request. In a consent decree entered Aug. 16, 1945, both suggestions were included. The borax company dismissed its suit and delivered a quit claim deed.

The decree enjoined perpetually the company, its subsidiaries, directors, officers, agents, employes, successors, assignees, or transferees from ever acquiring any interest in the Little Placer property. Capital lawyers said the language virtually constitutes an act of attainder, which formerly was the inseparable consequence of a judicial or a legislative sentence for treason or felony. Under this the property and civil rights of a person were wiped out, usually in cases of treason.

Ickes hailed the seizure of the land which had once been approved by his department as resulting in the establishment of government title to land worth millions of dollars.

PUTS VALUATION OF 97 MILLION ON SURFACE LINES

Prof. Harry G. Guthmann of Northwestern university, testifying as an expert yesterday in the federal District court of Judge Michael L. Igoe, said he believed the Chicago Surface Lines were worth a minimum of 97 million dollars. The Chicago metropolitan transit authority has offered 79 millions. Guthmann also said the lines could be reorganized, modernize their facilities in a few years, and thereafter have satisfactory earnings. He was cross-examined by Werner W. Schroeder, counsel for the authority. The hearing will be resumed Dec. 13.

Newsprint Ceiling Price to Be Increased $6 a Ton

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—The ceiling price of newsprint will be raised $6 a ton by OPA, generally effective Jan. 1, officials said today. This will set the basic port price of newsprint at $67 per ton. The action primarily is to assure an equitable price, but it "should also operate to prevent further decreases in United States newsprint production during 1946," it was said.

ADMITS CANADA MAY BE SOLD OUT IN BRITISH DEAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 4—Smarting under a British embargo against Canadian manufactured products, Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley, said in the house of commons today that Canadians "will have to adapt ourselves to that situation" if Great Britain "is going to sell us down the river."

He was defending his bill to appropriate an additional 650 million dollars for foreign trade loans to non-British European countries, Russia, and China. He said yesterday that loans to Great Britain will not be negotiated until after the Anglo-American credit talks are completed in Washington.

"There may be a lot of nervous people around who are afraid that the United Kingdom is going to sell us down the river," Ilsley said today. "I do not expect that they will, but if they do then we will have to adapt ourselves to that situation. We cannot run around outside a closed door down there [in Washington] clamoring to be in to say something about a deal that is being made between the United Kingdom and the United States."

HOGS ADVANCE TO CEILINGS AS RECEIPTS FALL

Many classes of hogs were sold at ceiling prices in Chicago yesterday as receipts decreased to the lowest Tuesday level in six weeks. Only 14,000 arrived compared with 37,750 a week earlier.

Price gains of 50 to 75 cents a hundred pounds were general in good to choice 175 to 300 pound hogs. Stock below and above this weight range advanced strongly as did plainer classes that declined most on last week's break. Sows rose mostly 40 to 50 cents.

Total receipts of cattle at 20 markets yesterday decreased to 59,000 from 72,000 a week earlier, but trading in Chicago was not affected by the volume cut. Buyers bid cautiously to avoid a price rise, and managed to obtain most classes at steady prices in a dull session.

Lambs were steady with top sales 5 cents higher at $14.70. Farmers paid $15.75 for feeder lambs, the highest December feeder price since 1925.

N. Y. CENTRAL SETS FINANCING FOR EQUIPMENT

The New York Central Railroad company yesterday sought authority from the interstate commerce commission to issue $17,700,000 of equipment trust certificates to help finance $22,308,500 of new equipment.

The road will purchase two 1,350 horsepower diesel frate locomotives, 153 steel coaches, 20 aluminum passenger-baggage cars, 50 steel baggage cars, and four stainless steel trains. Each train will consist of 15 coaches, one dining car, one kitchen-lounge car, and one tavern-lounge-observation car. The road also will build 750 hopper cars in its own shops.

TRUMAN PLAN NOT WORKABLE, SAY RAIL MEN

Flaws in Present Methods Told

BY PHILIP HAMPSON

Based on railroad experience, legislation proposed by President Truman for the handling of general labor disputes along the lines of the railway labor act will be ineffectual, leading Chicago railroad executives said yesterday. They explained that the railway labor act is satisfactory, but the administration has been bad.

The chief fault in administering the act has been the injection of politics, they said. The railroads have had to submit to certain rulings after politicians have overridden recommendations made by fact finding boards of the same type proposed by President Truman for use in other industries.

One-Way Street, He Says

"It is true there have been no general strikes of any consequence on the railroads for 19 years, or the length of time the railway act has been in effect, according to proponents of the law," one executive said. "However, the real reason is that the railway labor act so far has been a one-way street. The unions have threatened to strike whenever a decision or a recommendation of a fact finding commission did not suit them."

The first important instance of political pressure occurred in 1941 when the unions forced President Roosevelt to override the recommendations of a fact finding board headed by Wayne L. Morse, now Republican senator from Oregon, said the railroad spokesmen. When the unions set a strike date after they had turned down the recommendations Roosevelt had the fact finding board function as a mediation board which then revised the original suggestions.

Strike Threat Used as Lever

The second instance of political intervention was in connection with the 1942 wage demands of the union, the spokesmen explained. Recommendations of fact finding boards were rejected by the unions as was Economic Stabilization Director Vinson's refusal to authorize certain increases. Strike threats resulted in President Roosevelt's order for government seizure of the railroads in December, 1943.

After Roosevelt's intervention early in 1944 unions came out of the dispute with pay increases.

The railroad unions are rated as among the nation's most conservative and it is highly unlikely the younger and more radical unions would accept decisions going against them, but would follow the railroad union practice of appealing to the politicians, said the spokesmen.

Cost, Uranium Scarcity Curb Atomic Power

Scarcity of uranium and the expense of the atom splitting process will prevent atomic energy from competing with ordinary fuels in either commercial or military use for an indefinite period, Dr. Sanford A. Moss, consultant of the General Electric corporation, said yesterday at the air transport engineering meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers in the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Dr. Sanford A. Moss

Unless it becomes possible to process atoms of substances more plentiful than uranium, such as iron or steel, atomic energy probably will not be applied on a commercial basis to transportation or to stationary power plants soon, he said.

Merely Heat, Not Power Plant

Moss emphasized that so-called atomic energy was nothing more than extreme heat and could be considered merely a type of fuel, not a power plant in itself.

A pioneer in the development of gas turbines, he predicted that they would be used increasingly in air and rail transportation but said the only practical application of the gas turbine at present was in the jet propulsion planes. A gas turbine can supply power for either jet propulsion or a propeller, or both at once.

Not Practical for Autos

Such a turbine made small enough to power an automobile would be too tiny to be practical from the production standpoint. However, he said, turbines had been tested on ships and could be adapted for use in railroad locomotives.

The amount of fuel used was termed the major drawback of the jet propulsion plane, but Moss predicted that gas turbine fuel consumption would be slashed in the next few years for speeds up to 450 miles an hour.

Gen. Aniline to Pay Bonus of Half Million to 7,000

New York, Dec. 4 (AP) — General Aniline & Film corporation today announced $500,000 will be distributed as a bonus to 7,000 non-executive employes who have been with the company more than six months.

STOCKS RECOUP EARLY LOSSES, CLOSE UNEVEN

Rails and Utilities Lead Late Rally

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Stocks relapsed today on early profit cashing, but late buying of selected rails, utilities, aircraft manufacturing issues, and assorted industrials stemmed the decline and the market closed irregular. Sales totaled 2,310,000 shares.

Recently strong motors, steels, and air transports fell on relatively fast liquidation during the forenoon. Selling waned after midday and most losses were reduced. Gains of scattered favorites ran to 3 points or so.

Seat Price Falls $4,000

Hopes that President Truman's labor recommendations would settle widespread strikes, business optimism, and inflation prospects were regarded as brakes on selling. Numerous customers, however, trimmed accounts in the belief the climb to peaks for 14½ years had put the list in a rather shaky technical position. Sale of an exchange membership for $86,000, off $4,000 from a transaction yesterday, was viewed as bearish.

The Associated Press 60 stock average dipped 0.1 to 76.1, first loss since Thursday. The rail composite rose 0.2 to 48.6, a new top since March 17, 1937.

RAIL BONDS SWING

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—The bond market made a small scale advance, retreated, and then recovered selectively today. The gyrations centered mostly in the rails which boosted the day's business to $7,590,000 from $6,270,000 yesterday.

CHICAGO PRICES RISE

Price gains were extended in continued heavy turnover of 73,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Seventy of the 133 issues traded advanced against 40 declines. More active issues were Peabody Coal, up ⅝ to a 1945 high of 10¾; Admiral, up ½ at 18, a new high for the second consecutive day; Asbestos Manufacturing, up ⅜; Automatic Washer, unchanged, and Chicago corporation, down ⅛.

PARAMOUNT DEBT CUTS

I should like information on Paramount Pictures, Inc., debt reduction during the war.—M. F.

Thru use of surplus earnings and issuance of common stock for conversion of preferred stocks, Paramount has substantially reduced the obligations ahead of the common. Recent authorization of the retirement of 3 million dollars debentures makes a total reduction in the consolidated long term debt of about $22,688,000 since 1939. All the company's preferred stocks were converted or otherwise retired during this interval and all subsidiary preferred stocks were paid off. Total carrying value of these stocks outstanding in 1939 was $22,267,000.

Remaining funded debt is approximately $12,300,000, of which $5,300,000 is payable in Canadian funds. Earned surplus in the five years ended with 1944 increased from $10,526,000 to $46,160,000, and net working capital from $25,836,000 to $48,846,000.

Paramount's profit last year, including equities in undistributed earnings of partly owned companies, was equal to $4.39 a share on 3,752,136 common shares, compared with $1.07 on 2,456,927 shares in 1939. The excess profits tax last year was $20,355,000. In the first nine months of 1945 the share profit, similarly computed, was $3.69, compared with $3.33. The dividend rate is 50 cents quarterly.

It is of course uncertain what proportion of the company's war time increase in earnings can be maintained in view of the sensitiveness of the motion picture business to change in national income.
